Drapeau gets Olympic blast

By LEW DIGGS

MONTREAL (CP) — Justice Albert Malouf's inquiry into the Montreal Olympic cost spiral has issued a slew of recommendations to facilitate criminal prosecutions of corrupt municipal officials and to tighten public and government control over major construction projects.

An entire volume of the four-volume report is devoted to "conflicts of interest and other irregular practices," mainly involving links between officials of Mayor Jean Drapeau's city administration, Olympic contractors and the electoral funds of the Quebec Liberals and Drapeau's Civic Party.

Drapeau was heavily criticized for his key role in leading an orgy of spending on lavish sports facilities.

The report said Drapeau was "the real project manager" until late 1975, when the Quebec government stepped in because of chaotic conditions on the worksite.

"Not only was he entirely lacking in the aptitudes and knowledge required for this role, but also, as a politician and first magistrate of the city, he should have avoided placing himself in this position," said the report.

The sports facilities — including the main stadium built at a cost of more than $615 million — whose designs were chosen by Drapeau are described as "superfluous, unnecessarily luxurious and impressive."

The report said that given Drapeau's extraordinary power and personality, the mayor "must assume the greater part of the blame for the decisions made and initiatives undertaken with regard to the organization and construction of the Olympic installations."

The commission was immediately knocked by Premier Rene Levesque for supposedly being too soft on the former Liberal government of Robert Bourassa.

The report did say, however, that "close relations existed between the campaign funds of the party in power (the Liberals) and the awarding of government or Olympic contracts to certain professionals."

It also provided details of how special slush funds, one of which was apparently controlled by Bourassa himself, were set up by the governing Liberal party using contributions from Olympic contractors.

The report criticized Drapeau for his choice of Paris architect Roger Taillibert to design the facilities and for Drapeau's "sustained, unconditional support" of the French architect, who refused to allow the slightest cost-cutting changes.

The decision to hire an architect working in another country led to a situation which "created many serious problems of co-ordination and labor relations, which played a large part in the cost increases."

Drapeau was also slammed for alleged negligence in dealing with his right-hand man, Gerard Niding, who was chairman of the city's executive committee when lucrative Olympic contracts were being handed out without public tenders.

"The commission is of the opinion that Mr. Niding's manner of awarding the contracts mentioned in the evidence definitely placed him in a conflict of interest situation."

This conflict of interest included Niding's relations with an Olympic contractor, Regis Trudeau, who paid more than $160,000 for a luxury country house Niding had built in Bromont, Que.

Also mentioned are Niding's business dealings with several other Games contractors.

The report said Drapeau should have moved quickly to find out about Niding's involvement with these contractors. It said he had passed up several opportunities "to clear up the doubts expressed about his administration by getting to the bottom of things."

"It is evident that Mr. Drapeau had no desire to clear up the question. His testimony revealed a determination to ignore the problem."

It was the mayor's responsibility to conduct a thorough investigation of the situation concerning Niding's house in Bromont, the inquiry said. In not doing so, Drapeau "failed in his obligations as first magistrate of the City of Montreal and leader of the Civic Party."

Drapeau had his knuckles rapped by the inquiry for personally accepting five cheques from Trudeau for the Civic Party. The cheques, for $2,000 each, were given to Drapeau in his city hall office when the two men were alone.

This was described as "another example of a situation likely to affect the image of impartial man-

OZARKS TRAGEDY: A scenic holiday ended in tragedy for 34 elderly tourists early today when this bus left remote mountain highway near Jasper, Ark., after brakes apparently failed, and plunged 15 metres into rocky ravine. At least 20 persons were killed — mostly women — and 13 persons were hurt. The bus was on charter from Central Texas Bus Lines of Waco, Tex.

Williams blames city for homes hit by fire code

The city of Victoria has only itself to blame if it forces rest homes to close down because they can't afford to meet the fire safety regulations of the National Building Code.

Attorney-General Allan Williams said Wednesday the city had the option of adopting much less stringent fire safety guidelines, drawn up in 1978 and used voluntarily in most areas of the province.

Instead, Fire Chief Eric Simmons is enforcing a city bylaw which requires that tough code standards be met.

The Victoria city council fire safety committee has recommended that a letter be sent to the attorney-general, pointing out that enforcing these standards may force rest home operators to close down because they cannot afford to pay for the necessary upgrading.

But Williams said the problem and the remedy are in the city's own hands.

"If Chief Simmons were satisfied to accept the guidelines which have been found to be acceptable to the Vancouver fire department, then I'm sure many of these rest home facilities could meet those guidelines on a voluntary basis," he said.

"Chief Simmons has chosen, for his own reasons, to enforce the city of Victoria bylaw rather than these guidelines. Therein rests the problem."

One of the requirements of the code would be to change the battery-operated smoke detectors distributed by the provincial government for commercial-type detectors with large alarm bells.

However, Williams said the provincial fire commissioner feels the battery-operated units may be more effective and less troublesome.

Pan-Pacific withdrawing

By NORMAN GIDNEY

The controversial Pan-Pacific Society said today it is withdrawing from further involvement in planning the waterfront convention centre in Victoria.

In a letter to Mayor Bill Tindall and Finance Minister Hugh Curtis, the eight downtown businessmen who formed the society last year said they would also not press for Pan-Pacific to become the managers of the convention centre.

They stressed it was not a resignation and said the society will remain intact and place all its research material at the disposal of whatever group is formed to pick up where Pan-Pacific left off.

In their swan song, they did not refer directly to the conflict of interest controversy that blew up last week around Pan-Pacific president Dr. Arne Lane.

"There has been, of late, some concern expressed in some quarters as to the proposals made by the society for the future management of the centre," the letter said.

Pan-Pacific's proposal for a nine-member board on which the society would have a majority of directors was put forward only because it is convinced that there must be management of the centre which is independent of municipal or provincial governments.

The province, through the Provincial Capital Commission, is providing the land and most of the financing for the $8 million centre. The city is paying for a $1.7 million parkade and both governments are committed to sharing the projected deficit in the first years of operation.

"We would urge yourselves and the capital commission to seek a management formula which will take full advantage of the tremendous reservoir of skills available through our fellow citizens," Pan-Pacific said.

"We would caution in the strongest possible terms that all of our research and all the advice received throughout North America advises against direct or indirect government control of the management board.

"Our own recommendations which involve the utilization of a number of community groups, have been designed with these latter points in mind."

This $200 fine Canadian only

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bill Whitnack won't forget the day he was stopped on suspicion of being a Canadian — by the RCMP, in Canada.

The Surrey businessman was driving a car belonging to a visiting American friend when he became a victim of a little-known Revenue Canada regulation which cost him $200.

The edict prohibits Canadian residents from driving foreign-purchased vehicles on which applicable Canadian taxes and duty have not been paid.

Whitnack's friends from Abilene, Texas, were holidaying in B.C. and wanted to spend a day sightseeing on Vancouver Island.

"There were six of them and a child. My car is bigger, so I let them use mine and I used theirs to get to the office and the bank," Whitnack said in an interview.

On his way home, he was stopped by two Surrey RCMP.

"When I asked why, the constable said I was suspected of being Canadian."

A check was run on Whitnack's B.C. driver's licence and the Texas plates on the car. The vehicle was then impounded and Whitnack was told it would cost him $200 to get it back.

Once a foreign-owned vehicle is used by a Canadian resident — not necessarily a citizen — it is immediately subject to all duties and excise taxes applicable had it been purchased by a Canadian resident, said S.Sgt. Daryl Beere of the Vancouver RCMP excise division.

It wouldn't have mattered if Whitnack's friends had also been in the car. A Canadian resident cannot operate a foreign-owned vehicle or vessel without paying customs' toll.

"It's not that common," Beere said. "We get maybe one or two a month."

But to his knowledge, he added, the ones they get aren't told to take it home and park it. They pay up to $400, depending how many times they're caught.

The regulation is to discourage Americans buying and registering vehicles or vessels in the U.S., driving them here and turning them over to a Canadian.

Ferry director admits appointment patronage

Former B.C. Ferry Corp. director Graeme Roberts of Nanaimo today told the legislature's committee on crown corporations his appointment was pure political patronage.

"Certainly it was a political patronage appointment," Roberts said.

"I ran as a candidate for Social Credit. Without a doubt, I would not have been appointed if I hadn't been the premier's friend."

NDP MLA Stuart Leggatt (Coquitlam-Moody) congratulated Roberts on his straightforward statement. "It shows that patronage doesn't have to be a dirty word."

Roberts and Shirley Mathieson, president of the Ferry Workers' Union, testified in the committee's continuing probe into operations of the ferry corporation.

Both spoke of their frustrations — Roberts with the board's lack of direction and purpose and Mathieson with management's attitude to labor relations.

Both agreed it is not desirable to have a cabinet minister as chairman of the ferry corporation board. Transportation Minister Alex Fraser is the present chairman.

Roberts said one of the frustrations of the board and of management is having to sit around for hours — sometimes for a whole afternoon — waiting for a chairman who is held up in another meeting.

Mathieson said ferry management generally overreacts to labor disputes and this tends to lead to escalation.

She blamed a good deal of the labor-management friction on Norm Thornber, a former union business agent who is now labor relations manager for the corporation.

The workers think of Thornber as a turncoat, she said.

Plane flies on solar power alone

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The scientist who made possible man-powered flight, including the epic pedal flight across the English Channel last year, Thursday unveiled the first solar powered airplane.

The plane already has flown more than 50 times, piloted by his 13-year-old son, designer Paul MacCready, said.

MacCready admitted, however, there was no practical future in solar-powered aviation, pointing out that when the clouds come out, "You have a glider."

MacCready is building an advanced version of his plane for a 100-pound woman test pilot which he hopes will fly from London to Paris. Photovoltaic cells, which convert sunlight directly to electricity, power the plane's electric motors.

MacCready displayed the frail, 62-pound Gossamer Penguin at a news conference today and said it would make its "official" flight debut in a few weeks. Technical observers will be invited to witness a two mile flight, piloted by Janice Brown, a first grade teacher from Bakersfield, Calif.

He said it has already made more than 50 test flights with his son, Marshall, at the controls.

"He's 13, and he weighs about 80 pounds."

Weight is a critical factor for MacCready's "Gossamer" planes, made largely of plastic foam and Mylar, a very light but strong plastic film.

His Gossamer Condor won the $100,000 prize for the first achievement of human-powered flight in August 1977. Last June the Gossamer Albatross collected the $213,000 prize for the first human-powered flight across the English Channel.

Both planes were kept aloft by a pilot pedalling furiously on a bicycle-type crank to spin the propeller.

The Penguin has not yet taken off on solar power, though it has when powered by a battery.

But after being launched, kite-like, by his sons pulling ropes, it has sustained flight for up to 100 yards on power from the photovoltaic cells, reaching about 15 mph and an altitude of 12 feet, MacCready said.

Under construction is the Solar Challenger, which MacCready said will fly 100 miles between Los Angeles and San Diego before the end of the summer and then make an international flight.

"I enjoy this as a challenge," MacCready said. "It's a real fun thing to do. But this just isn't a practical way to move an airplane. A little gasoline engine would do all this far more efficiently."

Who put the pot plants in legislative garden?

The front lawn of the B.C. legislature recently has become a popular spot to defy the law, or at least to beard higher authorities.

Pat McGeer, the province's communications minister, attracted attention this week when he installed a television receiving dish on the lawns.

Now there's something else that could attract official scrutiny.

Nestled in the flower garden not far from McGeer's satellite receiver are eight, five-centimetre-high marijuana plants.

Told about the plants, Premier Bill Bennett said: "I don't do the gardening, ask Evan," referring to Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe, the minister responsible for the B.C. Buildings Corp.

Said Wolfe: "I wouldn't know a pot plant if I saw one."

Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt quipped: "It's a great cash crop, but not very nutritious."

And as for B.C.'s chief law officer, Attorney-General Allan Williams: "Well, I'll be damned."

up in the commercial detectors, Williams said, and this sets off the alarm.

The result is that the elderly residents become used to false alarms and tend to disregard the bell when it goes off — a dangerous situation.

The government spent $200,000 distributing the battery-operated detectors throughout B.C. and Williams said they are still acceptable under the provincial guidelines.

In buildings protected by bigger units they still can provide an additional level of safety, he said.

Bob Hickey, an inspector in the Vancouver fire-marshal's office, said the free smoke alarms were never intended to meet the national code standards — which are mandatory for new construction only, and are guidelines for existing buildings.

"The purpose of the smoke alarm system which the attorney-general distributed was to provide rest home facilities with an additional level of safety. It was not meant to meet the National Building Code," he said.

A program to upgrade all buildings throughout B.C. is proceeding

95 liquor store items up

Liquor prices went up Wednesday on 95 products stocked by the B.C. liquor distribution branch.

The increases were few in number compared with May when regular monthly adjustments coupled with a federal excise tax increase resulted in price increases on about 1,500 products, said branch spokesman Joyce Courtney.

She said there are a total of 124 price changes, with increases as much as $1.25 a bottle and decreases as high as 85 cents.

Hardest hit is Fraser MacDonald scotch, which jumped $1.25 to $9.95.

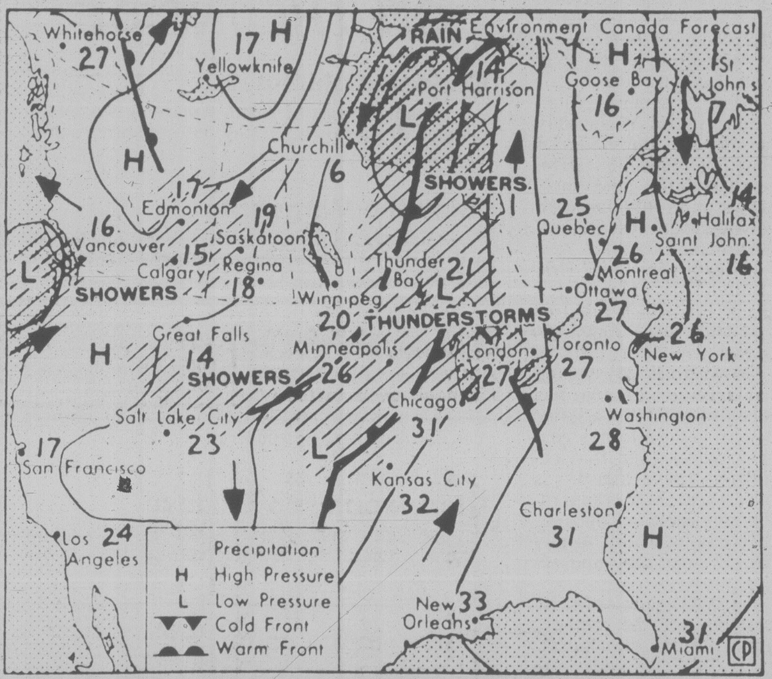

Map valid until noon Friday

Cool, moist air remains over southern B.C. with shower activity expected at most localities. Temperatures in the south will remain well below normal for this time of year. Meanwhile, northern inland areas as far east as the Bulkley Valley report temperatures in the high 20s. The ridge of high pressure over northern B.C. is beginning to slide southward and will bring a gradual warming and drying trend to southern areas in time for the weekend.

Ulster outbreak feared

CARNCLOUGH, Northern Ireland (AP) — A maverick Protestant politician who once belonged to Northern Ireland's main Roman Catholic party was killed in a hail of bullets as his wife drove him to a village hall meeting.

There were fears the shooting of John Turnley might mark the start of a fresh wave of sectarian killings as the British government prepares a new plan for Protestant-Catholic power-sharing in this strife-torn British province.

More than 2,000 persons have died in sectarian violence in Northern Ireland since 1969.

Police said three masked gunmen drove up alongside Turnley's car as it approached the hall Wednesday night, opened fire and sped off. Turnley died instantly. His wife, who was not hit, was taken to hospital suffering from shock.

Police later found a burned-out automobile, possibly abandoned by the killers, several kilometres outside this County Antrim village, 40 km from Belfast, where Turnley lived.

Turnley, in his mid-40s, was a controversial local figure who joined the largely Catholic Social Democratic and Labor party several years ago.

He quit after a row with the party leadership. But Turnley remained out of step with the majority of his fellow Protestants by joining the small bi-sectarian Irish Independent party.

May car sales plunge

Times News Services

Canadian sales of North American-built cars plunged 30.7 per cent in May from the same month last year.

Car sales totalled 66,898 units compared with 96,526 in May, 1979.

Truck sales were down 29.1 per cent to 26,400 units from 37,218.

May is traditionally one of the best months for sales in the model year. But even though interest rates declined in May, all four auto makers suffered as buyers stayed away from dealer showrooms.

The story was just as bleak in the U.S. where May sales of North American-made vehicles fell to the lowest level in 17 years. Tight credit and a shortage of fuel-efficient autos were blamed.

U.S. sales reports released Wednesday showed that the five domestic auto manufacturers sold 498,425 cars in the month, down 37 per cent from a year ago and the first time since September 1963, that the monthly sales total fell below 500,000. Import sales were down 22 per cent.

On a seasonally adjusted annual basis, sales in May slowed to a 5.3 million annual rate, making the month worse than any in the most recent recession. Sales fell to a rate of 5.6 million in November 1974, the bottom of the last sales downturn. The April sales rate was 6.1 million.

A few Canadian auto manufacturing officials expressed confidence about future sales propects as interest rates decline.

General Motors suffered the least of the four auto makers. The company reports car sales slipped 14.8 per cent to 42,911 from a record 50,378 units sold in May, 1979. Truck sales dropped 16.1 per cent to 14,462 from 17,246.

But GM car sales for the model year to the end of May totalled 305,503, up 3,659 units from record sales for the 1979 model year.

Ford reports its car sales were off 43.6 per cent to 13,942 from 24,736 in May last year. Truck sales were down 39.3 per cent to 8,504 units from 14,022.

The company's sales for the first five months of the year are also lower than for same period last year. Car sales declined 26.6 per cent and truck sales fell 19.8 per cent.

Chrysler Canada Ltd. suffered most in the May slump. The company says car sales were down 57.6 per cent in May to 8,011 units from 18,910 in May of last year. Truck sales were off 44.4 per cent to 2,802 units from 5,037.

Chrysler's car sales for the first five months of 1980 were down 29.6 per cent, while truck sales were down 21 per cent.

American Motors Canada Ltd. reports an 18.7-per-cent decline in car sales in May to 2,034 units from 2,502 a year earlier. Jeep sales were down 30.8 per cent to 632 from 913.

However, the company said car sales for the model year are up 15 per cent over last year.

agement of public affairs."

"That Mr. Trudeau gave these cheques to Mr. Drapeau in person and not to the party treasurer was no coincidence but a deliberate choice on his part. At the time, he was negotiating with the city regarding the settlement of his contracts."

Aside from the possibility of criminal prosecutions, a variety of civil suits are recommended against Olympic contractors to recover over-payments and improperly justified claims under their contracts.

In addition, the report says Parliament should amend the federal Criminal Code to eliminate provisions that impose tougher standards of proof in prosecutions of municipal officials than in the cases of provincial or federal public servants.

As the code stands, "it is more difficult to take legal action against a municipal official accused of corrupt practices in municipal affairs than to institute proceedings against an employee of the government of Canada or of a provincial government," the report says.

Another proposal is that the Quebec government draw up and strictly enforce province-wide codes of ethics for municipal and other classes of public officials.

"Clear, specific rules of conduct must be established to ensure that public officials can avoid real or apparent conflcits of interest between their official roles and their personal concerns."

The only specific proposal for such a code of ethics is that all officials be required to file statements, open to the public, containing detailed listings of property held by their families. Penalties for violations should be 'stiff,'' the report says.

More than St. Helens making ash of itself

VANCOUVER — It is raining steadily in The Village on the Edge of the Rain Forest, the skies the color of the underside of a Persian cat, and the cars have their lights on in the noon gloom.

The October leaden sky in the merry month of June must be caused, of course, by all that angry ash thrown up by the fitful gods in the bowels of Mount St. Helens. How else to account for the fall temperatures that have arrived four months too soon?

There are clearly other after-effects of the drifting volcanic ash that is bending minds, curling tongues as it drifts across the continent. Strange things are happening, explainable only by supernatural forces.

In Winnipeg, self-styled anti-obscenity crusader Joe Borowski, called the police officer in charge of "morals and pornography violations" to complain about some photographs by a Montreal artist and some nudes done by an 83-year-old Saskatoon artist in a Canada Council Art Bank show.

Obligingly, authorities partitioned off certain works of art, thereby shielding tender Winnipeggers from sliding into an abyss of sin.

Asked whether he thought the photos would be criticized if they were shown in Montreal, Borowski explained, "people in Winnipeg have higher moral standards than people in Montreal."

This piece of metaphysics perhaps should be wrestled to earth by larger minds.

However, since Borowski once served as an NDP cabinet minister for now Governor-General Ed Schreyer, he perhaps has insights into the inner purities of Manitoba souls denied the rest of us who can only recall Jimmy Coleman's tales of the race horses at Assiniboia Downs who were shot so full of dope they'd blow up on the backstretch like dirigibles held over a cigarette lighter.

The volcanic ash is obviously drifting into other people's inner lobes of logic. In Calgary, owners of the city's new NHL team have decided to stick with the name Flames which they inherited from Atlanta, the last stop.

In doing so, they bypassed public suggestions that the club be called Prairie Dogs, Critters, Krugerrands, Sod Busters, Rednecks or Yahoos. The latter suggestion, it is understood, came from Energy Minister Marc Lalonde.

The bothersome ash which previously had affected the brain of Ontario's Consumer Affairs Minister, Frank Drea, has now worked its way into his mouth.

His quote of the week, rivalling that of Mr. Borowski and explaining why the award winning The Tin Drum must be shielded from the eyes of Ontario movie fans, is, "the people of this province want censorship in films exactly the way it is being provided."

This gem recalls the old H.L. Mencken line that, "Democracy is the theory that the common people know what they want — and deserve to get it, good and hard."

Meanwhile, Mr. Trudeau, for his part, is helpfully preparing for a mood of cordiality with the provinces in their constitutional conference on Monday by unleashing the terrible twins of diplomacy, Lalonde and Jean-Luc Pepin, on the West.

Mr. Trudeau, having charmed the premiers with his well-known flexibility, next jets to Venice and the economic summit.

The sample of Venetian decadence should be useful, since he then heads for the Winnipeg cleansed by Joe Borowski that has been chosen the site of the Liberal Party annual convention so as to demonstrate the Grit affection for the western Canada that Lalonde and Pepin go about insulting. It's called the division of powers.

The ash obviously got in the eye of Mark MacGuigan, Mr. Trudeau's otherwise docile and courtly external affairs minister, who turned tiger suddenly and decided to bash away at Jimmy Carter, who thought Teddy Kennedy was all he had to worry about. Mr. MacGuigan has been put back in his cage and is being dusted lightly.

June is slightly too early for the silly season, but the gods are obviously irritated and grumbling. Look at the skies.

No movie: inmates riot

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Prisoners at the Kamloops Regional Correctional Centre went on a rampage Sunday night after they were denied permission to see a movie about a policeman who tried to enforce the law.

The disturbance involved 12 to 15 prisoners and was finally brought under control after about 10 minutes when a warning shot was fired.

The prisoners started a fire in the prison dormitory, smashed a color television, threw chairs through windows and tossed objects at the guard observation box.

Two guards received minor injuries from flying glass.

The disturbance erupted at about 11 p.m. Sunday after guards refused to allow prisoners to watch the late movie Walking Tall because some of the prisoners had been acting up earlier in the evening.

Eleven prisoners face charges including assault, destruction of government property and public mischief. Two others are charged with being unlawfully at large.

Study shows stumpage fees too low

VANCOUVER (CP) — A University of B.C. forestry professor says he has evidence B.C.'s stumpage appraisal system fails to reflect full value of the province's timber resource, resulting in government revenues being much lower than they should be.

In the last fiscal year, B.C. collected close to $500 million in stumpage, the fee companies pay to cut timber on Crown land.

Dr. David Haley, an associate professor, compared B.C. with the U.S. Pacific Northwest, where, he said, stumpage revenues are about 10 times higher, partially because of greater competition for timber.

Both regions use a similar formula for calculating stumpage, although there are various differences, including a much higher proportion of privately-owned timber in the U.S.

In an interview, Haley said the real price of timber in B.C. hasn't changed to reflect scarcities, as with oil.

B.C. Forests Minister Tom Waterland called Haley's 35-page study meaningless because of what the minister said are differences in the U.S. and B.C. systems.

Major sections of the report were read in the legislature by NDP forestry critic Bill King during debate this week on the ministry's spending estimates.

Haley compared logging and others costs in similar timber stands in B.C. and the U.S. and found that after inflation, stumpage rates increased in the U.S. and declined in B.C. between 1963 and 1978.

"There is little doubt that the principal reason for higher stumpages in the Pacific Northwest is that all public agencies involved in timber production encourage competitive bidding for standing timber, whereas in B.C. competitive sales of public timber have been virtually eliminated," Haley said.

He added that there are better markets for U.S. companies.

Helpful anglers off hook

KAMLOOPS (UPC) — Two brothers rescued two RCMP officers from a chilly lake and were rewarded for their efforts by being charged with illegal fishing — but they got off the hook in the end.

Daniel Johnson, 29, and Terry Johnson, 19, were granted a conditional discharge in provincial court Wednesday after pleading guilty to fishing out of season in Pass Lake.

Court was told the men had caught two fish when they were sighted by two passing RCMP officers.

The unidentified policemen jumped into a canoe and were heading out to apprehend the men when the boat capsized.

Crown prosecutor Bob Bruneau said the men almost dumped their own boat helping the police officers.

"Then, (the policemen) charged them," Bruneau said.

In asking Judge Jim Gordon to treat the accused as leniently as possible, Bruneau pointed out the lake was not posted with signs showing the season closed.

Bucks and bodies

A commercial-free B.C. public broadcasting station modelled on the United States Public Broadcasting System (channel 9) would be a welcome respite from the constant barrage of sometimes offensive commercials that now plague the airwaves.

Such a station would at least offer viewers more alternatives to American game shows, melodramas and sitcoms. It would also offer exposure to British Columbia film producers and writers.

But putting together a public broadcasting system will take two things: bodies and bucks.

The newly formed CFRE Public Broadcasting Society has asked the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) for the right to use VHF Channel 10 vacated by the CBC here in Victoria. But it has not yet demonstrated that it has either the bodies or the bucks necessary to get the station off the ground.

CFRE grew out of a group called the Association for Public Broadcasting, a Vancouver-based organization also dedicated to establishing a non-commercial television station in the province. Why CFRE rejected APB and formed its own society to pursue a similar goal is not clear. Nevertheless, the public as should not yet assume the support for this concept is being fragmented.

The society, however, seems to have put the cart before the horse in trying to talk the CBC into not selling its building and land at the corner of Kings and Blanshard Streets before consolidating its support.

CFRE leader Kim Martin is probably right when he says the sale of the building, estimated to be worth about $1 million, to private interests would substantially weaken the society's presentation to the CRTC this fall. But a lack of public support and money remains a far greater obstacle.

CFRE so far has 150 members who have paid $5 each for membership. That is one small step towards something that could be of immense benefit to the province. If the number of members was, for example 15,000, the CRTC and maybe even the CBC would sit up and take notice.

The birth of public broadcasting will take the resources and skill of many dedicated people. It is to be hoped there is no serious divisions between the Vancouver and Victoria groups.

Some helpful advice

A note of helpful advice to the Cowichan Valley Regional Board from friends further south on the Island:

So the environment ministry thinks that a suitable method of sewage disposal in your region might be a "properly designed and located outfall" discharging into Satellite Channel.

Perhaps it would. But take warning: the key words are that phrase, "properly designed and located."

Here in Victoria the same idea was approved about five years ago. The location was to be a place called Clover Point.

Since then we've had a collection of lawsuits and countersuits about the work, a lengthy dispute about plastic pipe, arguments about the disposal methods for the neighboring municipality of Oak Bay, a series of questions about the suitability of the system when problems developed in a similar outfall on the other side of town, remarkable cost increases in trying to get the system into place, and an unending series of technical and engineering problems.

At the moment, Victoria's sewage is still being dumped only a few hundred feet offshore, and all the neighboring beaches are marked with "polluted" signs.

Find another solution, Cowichan. Any other solution. It couldn't lead to more trouble than a "properly designed and located" outfall.

JAMES RESTON

Election battle continues

WASHINGTON — Now that the presidential primary elections are over, there are two questions: Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts, and Rep. John Anderson of Illinois. Should they continue their fight against Carter and Reagan, the clear winners in the primaries, or struggle on against almost hopeless odds into the summer nominating conventions and the final vote in November?

It's a hard question. Both of them are arguing for the unity of the nation, and running against Carter and Reagan because they don't believe Carter or Reagan can unify their own parties let alone the nation. But it's not clear that continuing the battle will make things better, and may even make things worse.

Nobody is very happy about the primary election process that selected these two men, not even Carter or Reagan. It could be argued that some of the losers in the primaries were more qualified to be president than the winners, and that the system of selection must be changed. But neither party can agree about how it should be changed until we get to George Orwell's gloomy vision of 1984.

Trudge on

Kennedy and Anderson have refused to accept the results of the primaries, and have decided to challenge the winners — Kennedy at least through the Democratic August nominating convention in New York and Anderson right down to the national vote in November.

They believe, with some reason, that neither Carter nor Reagan can bring the people together on all the problems before the nation, and that therefore they must give the voters another choice, but in the primaries the state voters have had other choices, and, while complaining all the way, have kept choosing Carter and Reagan.

That at least is the voting record so far. Kennedy and Anderson believe, or are at least acting on the assumption that the people are just now beginning to think about the alternatives to Carter and Reagan and may change their minds between now and November.

Kennedy could carry his fight against Carter into the rules committee of the Democratic Party in Madison Square Garden, but this would be a brutal battle, and the chances are that he would still lose.

Anderson could carry his independent national unity campaign until November, and in the process, divide the vote, and hurt Carter, whom he prefers over Reagan. But in the end, neither Kennedy nor Anderson is likely to prevail over the primary election majorities. Ironically, they might weaken them both and impede the national unity both of them are seeking.

Unless there is some unexpected revolt against Carter or Reagan — an economic disaster for Carter or some personal collapse or dramatic policy blunder by Reagan — the voters are probably going to have to choose between them. And considering the choices the voters have had to make in the last presidential elections, comparatively they are not all that bad.

EDWARD KENNEDY

Carter vs Ford in 1976; Nixon vs McGovern in 1972; Nixon vs Humphrey in 1968; Lyndon Johnson vs Barry Goldwater in 1964; Nixon vs John Kennedy in 1960 — in comparison with these presidential choices of the last 20 years, a campaign between Carter and Reagan in 1980, while no bargain, is not all that different from the choices of the last two decades.

Time and circumstances change presidential candidates. Their personal and political records of the past, while relevant, are not a sure guide to the present or the future.

Jimmy Carter, after almost four years in the White House, has a quite different view about the Washington bureaucracy, the Congress, the allies, and his Communist adversaries than he had during his election campaign four years ago.

He promised a government as good as the American people, but he discovered that the American people, the allies, and the Communists were not quite as "good" or as cooperative as he assumed. He is a quite different person as a result.

It will now be interesting to see what happens to Reagan when, like Carter, he has to face up to the realities of the presidency, and reconcile his amiable personality, conservative principles and television tactics with the brutal facts of governing the nation.

The presidential campaign of 1980 is not ending with the triumph of Carter and Reagan in the primaries. This is only the beginning. Once they have defeated Kennedy and Anderson, they will have to deal with one another in open television debates on the issues of the future, and that may make all the difference.

This may sound like a counsel of despair, and in a way it is. But even if Kennedy demonstrated that Carter had lost control of the economy, the foreign policy of the nation, and therefore the confidence of the people, there is no evidence that the nation would turn with confidence to him.

Anderson is a different figure, but he has his own problems. Even if the people turn to him as a deserved rebuke to both parties, it is hard to imagine that they would cooperate with him or enable him to govern effectively if he won.

Protests futile

It could be that, by continuing the fight, Kennedy could have some influence on the Democratic Party's platform, and Anderson could stand as a symbol of protest against the domination of the conservatives in the Republican Party. But in the end, their protests are not likely to prevail against Carter and Reagan but merely add to the dissatisfaction of the people in the choice they will have to make in November.

If there were a reasonable chance that Kennedy or Anderson could actually force a change in the mood of the country and compel their parties to nominate somebody else other than Carter or Reagan, it might be worth the violent political struggle that would ensue in the conventions and in the autumn campaign. But this is not really in the cards. Kennedy and Anderson have the power to object, but not to win, and their protest is more likely to weaken both Carter and Reagan, already seriously short on public confidence, than anything else.

RICHARD GWYN

Lougheed: ally or emperor

OTTAWA — Within the slightly less majestic confines of the protocol of federal-provincial relations, the incident ranks as our equivalent of the time that the Holy Roman Emperor, to show that he accepted the suzerainty of the Pope, travelled to Rome to kneel in the snow outside St. Peter's.

Recognizing that a columnist performs a role akin to that of an unmusical, medieval troubadour, or jongleur, even to have an occasion to report such an incident causes my fingers to tremble at the typewriter keys. Still, to help history to unfold as it should, to chronicle the event the attempt must be made.

Imagine the scene. There is Justice Minister Jean Chretien, stopped down in Edmonton as part of his Jet Starring tour of provincial capitals to sell the case for constitutional change following Quebec's referendum. And there with him, chatting easily and casually, is Alberta's Inter-Governmental Affairs Minister Dick Johnstone. They are getting along fine.

Then the door opens.

And in strides Premier Peter Lougheed.

Humbled himself

Canada's Supreme Regional Warlord, Grand Vizier of the Heritage Fund, Terror of the Tar Sands, Proconsul of Calgary, Chairman of the Board of Alberta Inc., Guardian of the Western Dream, has, for the first time in memory, actually entered the same room as a member of that lowest of all political species — a federal cabinet minister.

Never, ever, in person, on the 'phone, or even by telepathy, has Lougheed before talked to anyone in the Sun City of Ottawa, except his co-equal, the prime minister of the day. In June, 1978, after Trudeau had made public his latest constitutional proposals, then Justice Minister Ron Basford first flew east to London, to Buckingham Palace to explain them to the Queen, and then flew west to explain them to Lougheed, who told him to go down the hall and explain them to his opposite number in the Alberta cabinet.

My source, his eyes still shining with the excitement at the memory, recounted that, once in the room, Lougheed didn't pronounce anathema on Ottawa and all its works, but stayed, listened, and asked perceptive, and quite uncritical questions.

Whether the credit is due to Chretien for his salesmanship, or, as is at least as likely, to a stirring of statesmanship among the provincial premiers, all of them, Rene Levesque included, have agreed to come to Ottawa next week to start the gabfest out of which we might actually get a new constitution.

Things, in other words, are moving along nicely.

Enter Energy Minister Marc Lalonde.

Luckily for the sake of Confederation he wasn't in that room in the legislative building in Edmonton. Or by now every pipeline running eastwards to Ontario would have been cut.

Instead, Lalonde popped up at a dinner meeting of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association in Ottawa, to talk about the problems of striking a new oil deal with Alberta, and then, near the end of this speech, declared that, "We defeated (in the referendum) those who wanted political sovereignty with economic association. We did not carry out this difficult battle to get economic sovereignty with political association."

Naturally, Lalonde later denied that he had Alberta in mind when he said this; naturally, everyone knows that he did.

Skip for the moment the rights and wrongs of the Ottawa-Edmonton battle over oil prices and oil revenues. Hop over as well the detail that Lalonde well may be right in his warning that Confederation could fragment into ten economic sovereignties. (The most recent example of this process being the legislation planned in Nova Scotia to give preference to Nova Scotians in government hiring.)

Jump right on to next week's constitutional encounter. A problem with that meeting, it's becoming clear, is that Ottawa hasn't yet figured out what it really wants.

Does Ottawa — does Trudeau, that is — want to work its way slowly and painfully toward a new constitution by the path of conciliation and co-operation? If so, why was Lalonde allowed to blurt out his provocative remark?

National vote?

Or does Ottawa, as Opposition Leader Joe Clark has said, want the constitutional talks to "fail," so that, after six months or so of unproductive bickering, it could go on to the gotterdammerung of a national referendum in which we'll all be invited to say "Yes" or "No" to Ottawa's proposals.

In terms of realpolitik, either choice is emminently practical. What isn't practical is to try to go in both directions at the same time — Chretien spreading sweetness and light, and Lalonde hurling thunderbolts.

The time has come for Pope Pierre I to figure out whether he wants to turn the Emperor of Alberta into a scapegoat, or into an ally.

National input

Recently we witnessed the people of Quebec expressing their opinions on provincial and national plans and goals in the form of a referendum vote. I feel that it was a positive exercise to get the opinion of the average "person on the street" on such important topics. However, to limit this expression to the population of one province on one issue of the general topic of Canada's future is insufficient, to say the least.

I appreciate that constitutional reform will be the focus of many premiers' conferences and legislative/parliamentary debates, but it would seem that the May 20 precedent of opening the discussion to public opinion and expression is one that should be continued.

I would very much like to see the discussion and implementation of the revitalization and adaption of the BNA Act be officially extended down to the grassroots level. Perhaps this could be effected by organizing volunteer committees of interested citizens who would donate time to study the existing constitution and formulate recommendations for its modification to fit the current and future needs of this country. Ideally, there would be committees formed in most regions of Canada, thus providing a picture of the opinions and priorities of the people in all areas and all occupations.

The recommendations and suggestions resulting from the volunteer committees' work would then be submitted to provincial research analysts who would collate, interpret and summarize the data, and feed it into a national computer system for compilation with the results of all the other volunteer and parliamentary/legislative committees' findings. Such a system would ensure full participation by all interested Canadians in the reformation of our country at this important crossroads of our history.

I hope that such a scheme will be considered and implemented over the next months by our government as it proceeds in its program of constitutional renewal and reform. — Jennifer Stewart, 1-646 Simcoe Street.

No tradition

On May 9 a rather unusual event occurred in the House of Commons, when a motion was unanimously accepted to the effect that Parliament should ask the Queen to have a bill passed by her British Parliament providing for future amendments to our constitution to be made in Canada.

That resolution was so simple and sensible that I could hardly believe my eyes when I read it in Hansard for it changed nothing other than to transfer the constitution to its native land. Later the simplicity departed for when the request itself was spelled out it was conditioned on prior unanimous approval of all the provinces plus numerous restrictions on what could or could not be done once the move was effected. It even provides, under certain circumstances, for a national referendum requiring "a 75 percent plurality of all votes in Canada and no less than 50 percent of all votes in each and every province". In other words P.E.I., with fewer people than Victoria, could block whatever the rest of the country wanted to do.

Mr. Trudeau, Mr. Clark and many others believe that the unanimous consent of all provinces must be secured before any amendments to the BNA Act can be solicited but my question continues to be: on what authority is such a claim based? Certainly there is nothing in any statute to that effect, nor can it be backed up by history. It should not be forgotten that the 1949 amendment was brought about by Mr. St. Laurent despite the unanimous opposition of the Quebec legislature and no one has questioned its legality. In the early days many amendments were put through and three of them were actually processed by Britain on the simple request of the Canadian government without reference even to Parliament. The latter raised Cain about that and all subsequent amendments had their prior consent but a proposal that the provinces should also be consulted was rejected without debate. — F.L.P. Anderson, 409-2174 Cadboro Bay Road.

Control dogs

Re: Arrow through head, dog came home alive, May 27 Times.

Quote: "Mrs. Shaw said she let out George and another cockapoo named Porgy, early Sunday night". The question must be asked: Why were the dogs out on their own? Someone was sufficiently angry to take some action (admittedly cruel and drastic) to try to curb a situation that is steadily becoming worse throughout the city — dogs without owners to control them. If dog owners really care for their dog, they will make the time to exercise them properly and have them under control so that the rest of us are not asked to put up with the damage and nuisance caused by dogs roaming free. — L.A. Davis, 3555 Redwood Avenue.

Veterans' land

Tax notices are now out so I would like to point out a situation of great importance to the veterans holding land under the VLA. Only the veteran can be named as owner under the Act, but under an agreement with the provincial government if the veteran's spouse, male or female, is over 65 years of age but the veteran is not, he or she can still claim the over 65 provincial grant simply by asking for it. The spouse can sign the claim form as well as the veteran although he or she is not named on the tax notice. — G. Truax, 4471 Torquay Drive.

China moves from socialism

By DENNIS BLOODWORTH
London Observer

China's successful test-firing of an intercontinental ballistic missile last month added another Communist giant to the world's most exclusive suicide club. But one question still remains: How Communist is the giant?

When I first toured this country 25 years ago, revolution was the fuel. Mao provided the thrust, and there seemed little room for doubt. During a lethal heat wave in 1955, I sat in a forest of waving black fans in the Hall of Magnaminity in Peking, attending a session of the National People's Congress that unanimously voted to slow down the collectivization of farms. But within days Mao arbitrarily reversed the decision and demanded that it be achieved throughout the entire country by 1960. It was achieved in 1957. Mao had spoken.

There was no mistaking the mood then. The ubiquitous loudspeakers blared Socialist exhortations and revolutionary music, and the cadres in unisex blue prefaced every statement they made with a clockwork, hyphenated "Thanks to Chairman Mao and the Chinese Communist Party," until one heard it even in the rhythm of train wheels. China had found its future, but lost its soul.

Useless steel

I was back for Mao's Great Leap Forward in 1958, when the peasants were regimented in people's communes in which all private property was to be abolished, and many were diverted from the fields to make useless backyard steel. But the Great Leap failed, and Mao came under attack within the Party.

In 1966 he retaliated by launching his Cultural Revolution against the entrenched Communist hierarchy. President Liu Shaoqi was condemned for a Revisionist, and near chaos ensued again. Coming through the twisting Yangtse gorges, where the yellow waters rage opaquely beneath towering cloud-wreathed cliffs and whirlpools slip by like evil, empty eyesockets, I felt they symbolized what the long suffering Chinese had been through during the past quarter of a century.

Last month I was covering the same ground that I had covered before. But the Russians were long gone and the British, whose embassy I had seen besieged in 1958 by a yelling mob of tens of thousands strong demonstrating against our imperialist antics in the Middle East, were no longer anathema. On the contrary, the red carpets were unrolling for the latest distinguished "friendly foreigner," big Jim Callaghan.

No loudspeakers blared propaganda all day, but at the empty Democracy Wall in Peking, idle Chinese listened raptly to Auld Lang Syne played on Hawaiian guitars, and in Wuhan five pretty girls entertained Mrs. Callaghan with a rendering of Heilige Nacht tapped out on a monstrous set of 64 bronze bells about 2,500 years old.

In Sian, wailing oboes accompanying mourners shrouded in white revealed that while experimenting with heretical tastes in Western music — sacred and profane — the masses were also observing heretical Chinese "feudal" funerary customs. At Lingyin Monastery in Hangzhou, moreover, old women bowed and lit joss-sticks to a gigantic golden Buddha and it was just possible to believe this time that they were not performing to order for our benefit.

As Callaghan moved south from banquet to banquet, China came alive. Accompanying women cadres who had dressed in smart regulation dove-grey tunics in Peking soon broke into sky-blue, then into colored blouses and pleated skirts, and finally into frocks in which to say farewell in Canton.

At Chongqing (Chungking) the free markets were noisy with haggling, the officials frank and relaxed. In Shanghai one-man "co-operative" street enterprises drew the crowds — a sidewalk shoe-mender, a tailor cutting out a suit on a collapsible table, a carpenter making a wardrobe in an alley.

Shop windows were full of eye-catching goods, from colored bras and smart Western dresses to pressure cookers and Japanese calculators. A family of three, it is estimated, can now save about $30 a month.

In Sichuan Province, which has set the pace for China in the devolution of power and in giving private enterprise a long leash, some factories can sell everything they make above their state quota as and where they please, and keep the profit. A worker is paid $45 to $60 a month, and a flat bonus of $4 to offset a rise in food prices designed to narrow the gap between town and country. But he may earn another $30 a month by exceeding his quota.

In a farming commune, a seventh of the land may be devoted to private plots for the peasants, who sell their output on the free market, but a further seventh of the collective land may now be turned over to individuals or families, who may keep any surplus they grow after supplying the collective.

Chinese dissident selling unauthorized magazine

Chongqing officials say farmers are twice as productive when they work for themselves, but when asked if it would not then be more logical to yield more land to them, are quick to reply that peasants must still learn that collectivization, not capitalism, means prosperity.

And this is the nub of the "contradiction" in China today. The sheer Chineseness of the Chinese is threatening to burst the seams of Socialism. The defamed Liu Shaoqi is now redeemed, but when loudspeakers on our Yangtse steamer broadcast the lengthy memorial service held for him in Peking, the Chinese passengers hardly bothered to listen.

The people are pleased because they have more now, but discontented because they want more still. Communism has become irrelevant to millions, its study and strictures a chore, like paying taxes. China cannot afford this mood.

Own solution

Earlier last month Chairman Zhua Guofeng attacked material rewards and incentives, saying that "political work" and "people's ideological awareness" should be emphasized once again. This was straight Mao-talk, and inspired speculation that he was blatantly challenging Vice-Premier Deng Xiaoping, or reinsuring against the collapse of the present system. But most of the Central Committee of the party agree that Socialism must survive and be propagated.

Does this mean that Deng will inflict another twist in the political rapids on the irrepressible Chinese? As the Peking shop selling cheap electrical guitars does a roaring trade with the young, the official press warns the millions against the evils of decadent Western culture, and the government has begun to pare the number of foreign films distributed.

The Democracy Wall beloved of dissidents is silent, and many party cadres are showing a new arrogance. There could, in theory, be a return to bureaucratic Stalinism as an alternative to radical revolution.

Peking will doubtless find a purely "Chinese solution," however. The Chinese have studied the deviations practised in Romania, Yugoslavia and Hungary. The people who have traditionally had a natural instinct for Taoist negative action, whereby an opponent is made to fall by his own weight and momentum, are likely to avoid a direct clash of ideas by de-emphasizing, rather than stressing, some aspects of both Marxism-Leninism and modernization so that they merge into new mutant. Masters of the verbal somersault, they are already talking of "moving forward" from state control to collectivism.

The provincial leaders who impressed Callaghan will provide the fulcrum of the system, holding the balance between the Party ukase from on high and the pragmatic needs of those below. Whether the product should be called Communism may be open to doubt.

Restraints urged on police snoops

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

The right of citizens to speak in confidence to their elected representatives, to express their concerns without fear of reprisal or of interference, is crucial in any democracy. It is a right that has been threatened — is threatened — but it must always be defended. Without that right, the interests of the people cannot truly be represented by their political leaders; and without such representation, democracy becomes a pretence.

For the past six weeks, a committee of the British Columbia Legislature has been examining a direct, even a massive, assault upon the informal principle that conversations between an elected representative and his constituents ought to be privileged. Between December, 1976, and early 1978 the Royal Canadian Mounted Police sought and received judicial authority to intercept the telephone communications of James Nielsen, British Columbia's minister of consumer affairs. Mr. Nielsen himself was suspected of no offence at the time, and he is suspected of no offence now. Nonetheless, his phone lines were tapped; during a 14-month period, police were able to intercept telephone communications made or received by Mr. Nielsen at his ministry office, at his constituency office and at his home. Not until February, 1979, was Mr. Nielsen himself informed that his privacy had been violated.

True enough, the taps yielded evidence that contributed to the conviction earlier this year of two men on charges of conspiring to bribe Mr. Nielsen. In that sense, the police action was a success. But does the benefit justify the cost? Does the conviction of two men (who might very well have been convicted had police relied upon other investigative techniques) justify this gross invasion of communications between a politician and his constituents?

The B.C. Legislature's committee on privilege is examining precisely these questions. Were the wiretaps a breach of a member's privilege? Were they in contempt of the provincial Legislature? In a way, it is surprising — even shocking — that these questions even need to be asked. But they do. According to B.C. Education Minister Brian Smith, who chairs the Legislature's committee on privilege, no jurisdiction in Canada has established guidelines regarding interception of electronic communications between elected politicians and their constituents; nor, so far as he knows, does any jurisdiction in the Commonwealth. The very absence of such guidelines makes the work of Mr. Smith's committee all the more inportant, all the more urgent — for its report, whatever its contents, will set a precedent.

No one suggests that politicians ought to be immune from police surveillance. If they are suspected of having committed an offence, they should be answerable in the same way and to the same extent as any citizen. But that is not the principle at issue here. Mr. Nielsen was suspected of no offence; nonetheless, his phone lines were tapped because police were able to convince a judge that such action would yield evidence against other parties (and, under present Canadian wiretap legislation, such abuses of personal privacy are taken for granted — but that, too, is another story, and another editorial). At issue here is the right of citizens to take their concerns in confidence to the men and women charged with representing those concerns, the men and women elected to perform that duty. At issue here is the need for firm restraints on the ability of police to impede, even disembowel, a crucial democratic process.

Make no mistake. The sort of abuses that were committed on the phone lines of James Nielsen in British Columbia would make short work of destroying the public's faith in representative government — if they are permitted to take root. They must not be, and that message should be heard and repeated from Victoria to St. John's.

Russell Baker

NEW YORK — My hobby is cutting my hair. I took it up a long time ago, when the price of a haircut went to $1.50, but I didn't think of it as a hobby then. It just seemed like a sensible economy. Now people look at me curiously when, having been asked, "And what is your hobby?" I reply, "Cutting my hair." I am convinced this is why I have not been urged to run for the United States Senate. Gov. Hugh Carey came over to me in a crowded room once and, concluding the usual interview questions, asked, "And what is your hobby?" "Cutting my hair," I said. Since then he has not approached me about running for the Senate in New York.

For years and years I did not have a hobby. It caused acute distress in everyone I met — schoolteachers, scoutmasters and, later, desirable women, diplomats, philosophers and sycophants. Some great principle was being challenged. Every man must have a hobby. Not having a hobby testified to a defect. Only women did not have hobbies. "And what is your hobby?" people would ask? "I don't have a hobby." "Better get a hobby, boy," the men growled. I sensed in myself a failure of manhood. I began to dread the inevitable question: "And what is your hobby?"

Franklin Roosevelt had a hobby. He collected stamps. I tried collecting stamps for a while, tearing up envelopes, gluing my little treasures into albums. Hobbyists who loved collecting stamps hooted. The stamps were glued into the album. Glued! But then, it didn't matter that they were ruined, since they were worthless to start with. Collecting stamps worth collecting required a fortune. No wonder Franklin Roosevelt was a rich man. I abandoned stamps when the price of a haircut went from 25 cents to a half dollar. It was either give up the barbershop or give up the stamp album. I chose neatness.

The unpalatable truth was becoming all too clear about hobbies and me. David Brinkley had a hobby; he went down to his cellar and made cabinets. Walter Cronkite had a hobby; he went to the beach and sailed a boat. David Halberstam had a hobby; he put to sea and caught fierce fish. I did not like to make cabinets, could never remember the difference between the poop deck and the shivered timbers on a sailboat, and was terrified by fishhooks. The truth? I did not want to have a hobby. I only wanted people to quit asking, "And what is your hobby?"

One day, I was in the bathroom cutting my hair. The telephone rang. A burglar answered it. I heard the burglar say, "He cannot be disturbed now. He is cutting his hair." This was true. At that time, when cutting my hair I always did it in the nude to prevent the clipped hair from accumulating in my clothing, and I have a standing rule that I can never be disturbed while in the nude. At the same time, I realized that I had often received much the same answer upon telephoning Brinkley, Cronkite and Halberstam. "They cannot be disturbed," was the answer. "They are making cabinets, sailing and catching fierce fish." "Eureka!" I cried. "I have a hobby."

"But how do you cut it behind the ears?" They always ask that. How does Brinkley tell a piece of black cherry from a sheet of Formica? How does Cronkite tell the Cutty Sark from the Nina, the Pinta and the Santa Maria? How does Halberstam tell the conger eel from the great white shark? By experience, that's how. And practice. And hard hobbying. That's exactly how I cut it behind the ears. Guesswork is also important. Sometimes a miscalculation with the scissors takes a small wedge from the ear. The scars are the badge of my hobby, just as the nail through the thumb, the sea salt caked in the mustache and the fishhook in the thigh are the badges of, respectively, Brinkley, Cronkite and Halberstam.

Cutting your own hair is the most sensible of hobbies, since there is absolutely no possibility you will ever give up your regular work to make a career of it. This is because cutting your own hair in no way qualifies you to cut anyone else's hair. For one thing, very few people are willing to strip naked in order to get a haircut. At least outside California.

Costs of cutting-own-hair hobby: minimal. I began with only a pair of barber's scissors and a few newspapers. These serve to cover the bathroom floor, but if you don't like standing barefoot on newsprint you can invest a small sum in a broom and dustpan and sweep up after practising your hobby. A hobbyist with plenty of money, of course, may set up his own barbershop in the cellar with pump-handle chair, 20-foot mirror, marble-top counter, Dresden containers for bay rum and Lilac Vegetal, singe sticks, mustache wax and copies of Field & Stream and The Police Gazette.

Disadvantages of hobby: very few, particularly if you are not alarmed by looks of astonishment when others glance at your hairline, and have no ambition to run for the Senate.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market chalked up a broad gain, following through on Wednesday's rally.

Analysts said the market continued to benefit from declining interest rates.

A few large U.S. banks cut their prime lending rates to 13 from 14 per cent. And the First National Bank of Greater Miami lowered its basic charge on blue-chip loans to 12½ per cent.

Falling interest rates have received much of the credit for the market's spring rally, because they have eased fears of a money crunch and reduced the relative appeal of interest-bearing investments that compete with stocks for investors' funds.

Gulf United led the active list, up 1⅜ to $21¼ in trading marked by numerous large blocks. The company said the activity might stem from purchases by American Financial Corp., which has agreed to acquire up to 20 per cent of Gulf United.

The NYSE's composite index rose 0.62 to 64.86.

Volume totalled 35.12 million shares with two hours to go.

London

LONDON (Reuter) — The London stock market was mixed near the close of moderate trading.

The Financial Times Index of 30 industrials closed at 423.4, up 0.4

Banks and golds were higher but equities were mixed.

Canadian issues were also mixed.

Cattle

CALGARY (CP) — Receipts to 11 a.m. today at the Calgary public stockyards totalled 660 cattle and calves consisting of a normal run of slaughter steers and cows with a light supply of slaughter heifers.

Trade was moderate from local buyers on all classes on good condition cattle. A1-2 steers over 1,000 lbs. sold 50 cent higher as did heifers. D1-2 cows gained $1.50 while D3-5 sold $1 higher. Bulls traded steady.

Bonds

TORONTO (CP) — Prices were higher in active trading on the Canadian bond market Wednesday.

The short end of the market was up 30 cents. Mid-, long-term and provincial issues gained one-half of a point. Corporate issues rose three-eights.

Day-to-day money was available at 15 per cent.

In New York the Chase Manhatten and Morgan Guarantee cut their prime rate to 13 per cent from 14 per cent. Analysts said this is the first time since last August that the U.S. prime rate dropped below the Canadian rate, which is currently 13¾ per cent. A possible consequece of this may be a stronger Canadian dollar as U.S. subsidiaries in Canada pay back their loans to parent companies to take advantage of the lower U.S. rates, an analyst at Merrill Lynch, Royal Securities Ltd. said.

House sales up, despite high rates

TORONTO (CP) — Housing purchases during the first quarter of 1980 were 1.5 per cent higher than first-quarter sales in 1979 despite abnormally high mortgage rates, says a survey by the Canadian Real Estate Association.

The average price of residential units processed through the Multiple Listing Service was $63,358, 3.7 per cent above the first quarter of 1979.

Association president Eric Charman of Victoria said the figures prove the public realizes that high interest rates are not a deterrent to home buying.

"In fact, people realize what may be paid extra in interest during a time of high rates is reflected in savings in the cost of a home as prices continue to rise," Charman said. "No interest or mortgage payments have to be made on the savings."

The vitality of the real estate market should dispel the gloomy forecasts coming from many quarters early in the year, he said.

"The big slump that had been predicted did not occur in spite of a period of difficult mortgage interest rates," Charman said.

"In fact, some areas were so active, particularly in Alberta and B.C., that properties were snapped up as soon as they came on the market."

The highest average residential prices were in Alberta at $83,052, while in Atlantic Canada, except for Newfoundland, prices were lowest, averaging $44,292.

Special U.S. trade talks urged

TORONTO (CP) — Canada should negotiate a special economic relationship with the United States, a trade expert says.

Rodney Grey, an independent consultant and adviser to the Ontario government on the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT), said in a paper prepared for the Ontario Economic Council that Canada and the U.S. should set up a joint agency to deal with economic issues.

The agency could study the possibility of special trade arrangements between the two countires but Grey said he does not advocate free trade or a Canada-U.S. common market.

Grey, who for many years was a senior trade negotiator for Canada, said the government errs in trying to solve its trade problems with the U.S. through international bodies such as GATT, because the U.S. concentrates more on relations with other trade partners in such negotiations.

He said Canada should negotiate separately with the U.S. and he called for a review in both countries of legislation that bears on trade.

McGeer, Fox on collision course

B.C. Science Minister Pat McGeer and federal communications minister Francis Fox appear to be on a collision course over McGeer's insistence the federal Radio Act, drafted in the early 1930s, doesn't preclude him from picking up American satellite signals with the receiver he has set up on the lawn of the legislature.

Fox said Wednesday that if McGeer continues to use the receiver to pull in American signals, his licence could be revoked. McGeer will get a warning some time later this week if the violation continues, he said.

The licence McGeer obtained from the department of communications authorizes him to use the receiver to pull in only programming from the Canadian ANIK-A and ANIK-B satellites.

McGeer, who indicated earlier this week his ministry has received approval from some of the U.S. stations to pull in their signals, said the department of communications has no authority over U.S. satellites.

"If they think that the DOC does have the authority — and that's not our interpretation of the Radio Act — let Mr. Fox pass a clear law saying so."

McGeer would not indicate whether he will stop picking up American signals if asked to do so by Fox.

Asked if he is trying to provoke Fox into changing regulations governing use of satellite receivers, McGeer only said: "We're simply trying to catch his attention."

Fox also said Wednesday if McGeer doesn't live up to conditions of the licence, other agreements could suffer because the minister's word might be doubted in the future. However, McGeer discounted this suggestion.

Receivers such as McGeer's are popping up in many remote northern communities which get no television reception or only weak Canadian television signals. They allow residents to choose from a wealth of programming — including first-run movies on U.S. pay television.

Several hurt by Ocean Falls shutdown

Industry Minister Don Phillips has revealed that the Los Angeles Times is not the only customer left in the lurch by the B.C. government's decision to close the Ocean Falls Corp. newsprint mill.

"My understanding is there were about four or five other contracts," Phillips said Wednesday.

The minister was unable to supply any information about the other contracts but said he doesn't see any great problems at present.

NDP leader Dave Barrett, meanwhile, has denied he said the Los Angeles paper would sue the B.C. Cellulose Corp. for breach of a newsprint supply contract.

"It was made perfectly clear to me by the newspaper's legal counsel that no legal action was being contemplated at this time," he said.

But if it sues, it will be for millions of dollars, the opposition claims.

Phillips dismissed the talk of a lawsuit, saying the Times "just wants to flex its muscles."

There are many such cases in the pulp and paper industry where companies are unable to live up to their contracts, he said.

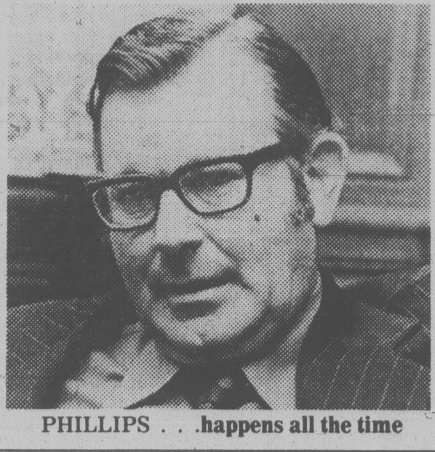
"It happens all the time."

The Times still has four years to run on a five-year contract with Ocean Falls Corp. calling for delivery of 30,000 tonnes of newsprint a year.

The Ocean Falls deal with the Times was the Crown corporation's only North American contract for the sale of newsprint; the remainder was sold on the world market through Central National Corp., of New York.

B.C. Cellulose head Ray Williston said he doubts the newspaper will take legal action.

"They have another new plant coming on next year, and if the market recedes, they won't be looked on in a favorable light if they decide to go to court against us."



PHILLIPS . . .happens all the time

Coal deal signed in June: Phillips

Industry Minister Don Phillips denied rumors Wednesday that the northeast coal deal he has been promoting for so long is about to fall apart.

The deal will be signed this month, he insisted.

Asked if he will resign if it isn't, Phillips replied with a laugh: "I may not have the chance to resign."

The federal cabinet is today considering the Canadian National Railways' own financial figures and recommendations on the building of a rail spur into the Sukunka coal fields.

The B.C. government estimates total cost of the spur line at $215 million and has asked the CNR to build it.

However Phillips says B.C. is still prepared to go it alone in developing northeast coal.

"If they (the CNR) can't do it, we're going to have to do it," he said.

In Ottawa, federal Transport Minister Jean Luc-Pepin said the B.C. government's proposal will leave the CNR with "the shaky aspect" of the project.

The Socred government has set a deadline of June 10 for a decision on the proposal.

If there's no answer on a rail line by then, Victoria says a potential multi-million-dollar deal with the Japanese could fall through.

Originally, B.C. Rail was to get the coal to Prince George in the centre of the province from where it would move along the CNR mainline.

Under the new proposal, CNR would be responsible for upgrading existing rail lines and building a new 115-kilometre spurline northeast of Prince George as well as for upgrading its main line.

Senator Ray Perrault, government leader in the Senate and the only B.C. cabinet minister, said the proposal by Phillips was made without any prior notification by the province.

He said main line upgrading under the original proposal would have cost CNR $60 million to $90 million.

"CNR officials have been working overtime to come up with the cost of the rest of the project," Perrault added.

"The preliminary estimate of $215 million to establish the infrastructure appears to be very much higher than that amount."

Asked if the government could meet the provincial deadline, Perrault said perhaps there could be some flexibility in the deadline.

He said the deadline was not set by Ottawa or the CNR but by Victoria and the Japanese.

The Japanese steel industry has given B.C. coal companies until June 15 to present it with a price tag for the annual sale of 5.3 million tonnes of metallurgical coal.

Coal companies need to know rail financing details so they can calculate a price.

After Ottawa offered only $70 million to help B.C. rail build the new line, Victoria proposed that the CNR build it.

"So it's not B.C. anymore that carries the shaky aspect of this thing," Pepin said in an interview.

He said B.C. has also asked to take over responsibility for a coal terminal on Ridley Island at Prince Rupert, another matter that is being discussed.

Good chances for Falls mill

VANCOUVER (CP) — Forests Minister Tom Waterland says a consultant's report shows favorable chances for the timber-starved Ocean Falls Corp. to get wood needed for an experimental milling process.

Timber will be granted to the Crown corporation under a provision of the Forest Act that avoids competition from other companies, Waterland said.

The NDP has protested there should be wide-open competition for timber in B.C.

Waterland said during debate on his ministry's budget estimates this week that a report will be presented to Ocean Falls Corp. officials Monday.

He said he understand the report indicates favorable chances of the corporation making use of wood previously considered uneconomic in the mid-coast region.

The timber would be used in an experimental sawmill and wood chip facility taking the place of the recently-closed pulp and newsprint operation. The sawmill will manufacture special timber, called flitches or cants.

While operating a previous pulp and newsprint mill, Ocean Falls Corp. had to buy all its raw material on the open market because it had no timber harvesting rights.

Those rights were kept by Crown Zellerbach Ltd. when it sold the operation to the NDP-government in 1973.

Bill backs island control of energy

A separate, locally-controlled energy authority for Vancouver Island is proposed in a private member's bill introduced in the legislature Wednesday by Bob Skelly (NDP-Alberni.)

The Island would be a unique place to carry out an experiment in low-technology energy, energy conservation and alternative energy sources, Skelly said.

But B.C. Hydro would be the wrong agency to carry out such an experiment, he argued.

"B.C. Hydro has grown too big. There are too many institutional barriers there. They are victims of their own size."

Skelly said setting up a separate energy authority for the Island would be consistent with the recommendation made last year by the legislature's Standing Committee on Crown Corporations — that Hydro be broken up into smaller operating entities.

This is the second time Skelly has introduced the same bill. The first time, in 1978, it died on the order paper without debate.

Skelly said the interest shown by individuals and municipalities persuaded him to take the legislation out of mothballs.

Lawyers warned by ombudsman

HARRISON HOT SPRINGS (CP) — The legal profession should put its house in order or face possible intervention by the provincial ombudsman's office, Ombudsman Karl Friedmann said Tuesday.

Friedmann, whose role is to hear complaints against government and administrative bureaucracies, told B.C. lawyers at their annual convention that the legal profession can be brought within his jurisdiction.

He said legislation creating his office contains a section giving him jurisdiction over members of self-governing professions, such as lawyers, doctors and dentists.

Friedmann said the professions' section of the Ombudsman Act has not been proclaimed but the legislature could activate it if complaints against lawyers continue.

"The fact that the Law Society could come within the ombudsman's jurisdiction should not be looked upon as a threat," Friedmann said. "It would stem the demand for greater public control of the profession."

He told a joint meeting of the B.C. branch of the Canadian Bar Association and the B.C. Law Society that in a three-month period he received 11 complaints about the society and 36 against individual lawyers.

Friedmann said the type of complaints he receives against lawyers indicate the public is not satisfied with the legal profession's internal disciplinary procedures.

He said the public expresses suspicion, fear and cynicism in its assessment of the manner in which the legal profession disciplines its own members.

Friedmann said a solution might be provided by lay membership in the legal profession's governing body of benchers, including its disciplinary committee.

Earlier, lawyer Gordon McFarlane advised the lawyers of a heavy run on their professional liability insurance plan, the scheme began in 1971 by which they insure themselves against damages for mistakes.

McFarlane said the insurance firm's experience with B.C. lawyers had been bad during 1977 and 1978 and the experience last year did not look very encouraging.

Because of the deductible provisions, McFarlane said, the Law Society also stands to lose heavily on the liability insurance. The society pays the first $35,000 on each claim, to a maximum of $750,000 each insurance year.

A large number of claims before 1978 were a result of lawyers' failure to issue writs within a required time period in respect to motor vehicle accident suits.

McFarlane said the high number of such claims prompted the insurance underwriters to impose a $10,000 deductible on any claim arising out of a lawyer's failure to issue the writ.

He said 70 per cent of claims arise out of administrative errors by lawyers and 30 per cent from lawyers' lack of knowledge or ignorance of the law.

. . . may intervene

NO BED OF ROSES, but Parliament never was. This bed of tulips in full bloom on Ottawa's Parliament Hill still adds color to what often becomes pretty dreary rhetoric in the Commons.

Even Friedmann is snarled in red tape

B.C.'s ombudsman now has first-hand knowledge of the frustrations of dealing with government.

Dr. Karl A. Friedmann, in his first annual report, complains of the delays caused by red tape.

"Delay is one of the bureaucracy's most irritating characteristics," writes Friedmann in the report presented to the legislature Wednesday.

"It is unacceptable to me that the ombudsman's office itself should experience unnecessary or unjustified delay in responding to citizens' complaints. Yet it has happened."

Part of the problem was caused by civil servants who would not recognize his investigators' right to see government files but, time and again, forced them to wait while checking with their superiors, Friedmann said.

He told a press conference that the word now appears to have filtered down through the ranks and things generally move more smoothly. However he still runs up against obstacles.

"We are in the process — and it's a lengthy process — of arguing with the attorney-general's ministry about our access to documents. They have a number of legal arguments why we cannot have access to certain documents we require."

The ombudsman's first report covers only three months of actual operation — the last three months of 1979.

During that time his office received 924 complaints, almost three times the number expected. Friedmann estimates his office will handle 2,500 to 3,500 cases in a full year.

Of the 924 complaints, only 256 had been dealt with by the end of the year. However Friedmann said this does not indicate a low success rate since many were completed in the new year.

Thirty-seven per cent of the cases dealt with matters outside the ombudsman's present jurisdiction. That's pretty good compared to Ontario where 45 to 55 per cent of complaints received are outside the ombudsman's jurisdiction, Friedmann said.

The greatest number of complaints dealt with the Workers' Compensation Board, followed closely by the Insurance Corp. of B.C. and the ministry of human resources.

The highways ministry and the attorney-general also were popular targets.

Generally, the complaints received were serious, Friedmann said. Only one or two were discarded as being trivial.

If anything, British Columbians are reluctant to approach the ombudsman's office.

"Very many of them are diffident about their complaints. They sort of apologize about bothering us."

Of course, they do get the odd weirdo.

"We had one complaint from a person who thought he was God," Friedmann said.

"He had figured out what was wrong with the world and wanted us to adjust it. We told him we have a rather limited jurisdiction and if he believed what he was saying he should do it himself.

"He accepted that. He went away happy."

At present the ombudsman has a staff of 24 — 10 in Vancouver and 14 in Victoria. He has asked the government treasury board for funds to hire 10 more full-time staff.

Meanwhile, he is barely able to stay ahead of the caseload with the help of eight summer students, Friedmann said.

civic affairs

A collection of other people's observations this week:

Victoria native Denny Boyd, once a sports writer on the Times and now columnist for the Vancouver Sun, didn't like what he saw on a weekend trip to his old hometown and told everyone in Upstart City what a dump Victoria is:

"Down to Victoria, to the family home and a painful shock to see how shabby, how blighted the downtown area has become. The drive around Dallas Road and Beach Drive is still magnificent, the old homes lovingly kept, but the urban core has gone down the crapper.

"Victoria seems to have accumulated all of Vancouver's old hippies and layabouts, and they dominate the main intersection at Yates and Douglas and hit you up for spare change on the Causeway in front of the Empress Hotel. Down Yates to the harbor, they have their own little hooker problem.

"They don't seem to have put up a major building of any attractiveness in downtown Victoria since I left, and the architcture that isn't plain dull is plain seedy. It's a city that is desperately in need of some imaginative vertical development to make the lack of overhead wiring more vivid. And it needs a damned good scrubbing."

But Boyd was impressed by one thing — the Empress barred him from two lounges because he was wearing blue jeans, expensive tailored blue jeans, but still denim.

"I think maybe the whole city needs to return to those rigid standards, if it wishes to reclaim its old charm."

What do you think? Is Victoria going "down the crapper"? Or is it better than ever?

Fight Vancouver chauvinism — tell us what you think of Victoria and we'll print a selection of your comments.

Pierre Berton (Class of '37) never made it to Oak Bay High School's grand reunion on the weekend, and considering what he told last year's graduates it's probably just as well. He wouldn't have escaped alive if he had showed up.

Someone who heard his address last June (the class of '79 invited him to speak) took notes.

"I'd like to be able to say Oak Bay was a fine high school in the 1930s," said Berton.

"Well it wasn't. It was a terrible school. I thought it was the worst school in the world."

The education system was old and creaky in those days and there wasn't much imagination used by teachers, according to Berton.

"You had one option in your first year. You could take Latin or manual training. There weren't any clubs, no band or school paper."

Berton started his own paper, a clandestine publication typed out laboriously by hand. He rented out the single copy to other students.

"Ronnie Hines and I started the Grand Order of the Pest. Hines stuck a box of tent caterpillars in the teacher's inkwell. They walked all over the page and Ronnie Hines got two things — field marshal (in the GOP) and the strap."

There wasn't any refined graduation ceremony for the Grade 12s.

"They kicked us out and were glad to see us go."

His advice to the students? Don't study too hard.

"I found people who studied 'til they were red in the face were often failures in society. The most important things are what goes on outside the class.

"Marks are no big deal. All the way through Oak Bay I did very badly in grammar, composition and literature."

Until he was a year into old Victoria College, then housed in Craigdarroch Castle, Berton thought he was destined to become a chemist. He used to put on chemistry shows in the garage out behind the family home on McNeill Avenue and charge five cents a kid.

It was a close call. Imagine if Berton hadn't switched horses. He might have discovered rayon or laser beams and several large forests would still be standing because more than 30 Berton books on everything from the Klondike to old movies to the CPR would have remained unwritten.

I don't know whose was the greater loss.

Sink Maggie? Some would

No shortage of ideas for old ferry but she won't be museum or hostel

By AL FORREST

The Princess Marguerite is like a St. Bernard dog.

Lovable enough, but who could afford the upkeep?

Not anyone around here, it appears, and Maggie sits at Burrard Yarrows Corp. in Esquimalt waiting for something to happen.

There is no shortage of proposals but they are either too expensive or too bizarre.

The recurring talk involves floating hotels, restaurants and even a casino.

It will almost certainly not become a maritime museum or a hostel.

Maritime Museum director Keith Cameron sighs when he thinks of the possibilities — but the reality is something else.

"The costs would be enormous," he said.

"Once she is docked she becomes a building, an old one."

New heating systems, new wiring and fire sprinklers would have to be installed.

Strict fire safety standards for buildings would be applied to the docked vessel.

And that's just the start.

"There would have to be a large, a very large, annual subsidy. Maintenance crews would have to work full time to chip out rust and to see that water is not collecting beneath the boards of the wooden deck.

"I don't know who could afford expenses like that. I know the Maritime Museum couldn't."

The hostel idea would fail for the same reason. The Canadian Hostelry Association doesn't want the Maggie, even for $1, unless some organization will pick up the tab for the continuing costs.

Still there is no shortage of ideas.

In the bizarre category is this one from local divers.

The ship should be taken to Saanich Inlet and sunk. It would become a sensational tourist attraction for scuba divers from around the world.

Conventions of scuba divers would come to Victoria to see the sunken wonder!

The proposal does not have the official sanction of any organization but it does have one advantage — it would solve the problem of the annual upkeep.

But there would be no guarantee the Maggie could be kept secure from trophy hunters who might strip her bare.

Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Cedric Steele, who launched the campaign to convert her to a maritime museum, now agrees the idea might not be too practical.

"It would be expensive. Perhaps the chamber should hold a contest for some other good idea."

Visitors Information Centre president Les Wood agrees.

"I hope we can put the vessel to some useful purpose. Maybe there should be a contest for ideas."

Still on the table is a promise from Premier Bennett that Victoria can have the ship for $1 to convert it to a maritime museum.

That promise, along with all responsibility for the ship, now resides in the care of Highways Minister Alex Fraser, the minister responsible for the ferry fleet.

But the maritime museum proposal was linked to the concept of having surplus funds from the community-run jetfoil service to devote to the project.

But Pat Crofton, president of the Flying Princess Transportation Co., now says profits are by no means assured. In fact, early returns have been disappointing.

It would be hazardous to have any project depending for its survival on excess revenues that might, or might not, come from the Flying Princess.

In addition, the Maritime Museaum already has a firm proposal on the drawing boards to move from Bastion Square to new quarters on the Causeway below the Visitors Information Centre.

Not quite as romantic as being in the Maggie, but an excellent location for them and the annual cost would be a pittance compared to what it costs to keep the ship afloat.

Whatever will become of the Marguerite?

Bus pass system starts Monday

Starting Monday, bus riders will be able to buy day passes for unlimited trips within the urban area.

A pass for an adult will cost $1.25 while students will pay 60 cents.

Senior citizens and children aged five to 11 will pay 35 cents.

The passes will be available from bus drivers on an exact coin fare basis but can only be used by the person buying them.

Chief transit planner William O'Brien told the Capital Regional District's transit planning committee Wednesday the 40-foot buses needed to improve suburban service will not be available for a year.

He said the Urban Transport Authority had opened tenders on May 23. The lowest bidder on the 40-foot buses required for suburban service — plans call for 12 of these to be used — could not deliver before next June.

The lowest bidder on the smaller 30 and 35-foot buses had given a delivery date of Dec. 31, 1980.

On O'Brien's recommendation, the committee will urge the regional board to approach the UTA and ask that some of the smaller buses be made available on an interim basis so service can be improved next January as planned.

O'Brien warned the buses should be used on a temporary basis only, otherwise it would be necessary to stock additional parts.

Regional board chairman Jim Campbell said the problem was the CRD had, in good faith, accepted responsibility for public transit a year ago but the provincial government "had failed to get on with the business of ordering buses. The buses will come a year after we began collecting taxes."

Three back break from CRD

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY

Three Saanich aldermen said today they would support a move to break with the Capital Region District.

Ald. Sandy Noel, Ed Lum and Geoff Vantreight told the Times they agree with the suggestion made by Ald. Mary Casilio earlier this week.

All three aldermen said they are receiving many anti-CRD calls from residents.

However, Mayor Mel Couvelier said Saanich has no legal authority to withdraw from the regional district.

He also said public resentment of the CRD should be recorded and sent to the provincial government.

"It would be useful for the provincial government to know how Saanich feels," Couvelier said.

"I believe the vast majority of people are fed up with regional districts and their inability to do anything effectively," he said.

The mayor said he would like a legal opinion whether a referendum is one way to record public opinion.

Casilio suggested to council the municipality hold a referendum this fall to find out if voters want to split from the region.

Couvelier said Saanich is bound by law to belong to the CRD and a referendum asking residents if they would like to remain in the body may not be legally possible.

The mayor said he will not take any action on this issue.

"I'll leave the initiative up to them (other aldermen)," he said.

Noel said he is getting nothing but complaints from residents fed up with the way the regional district is operating.

Lum said he opposed the formation of regional districts in the first place.

"Planning was one thing I was never inclined to think the CRD should have taken over."

The alderman, who operates a greenhouse on McKenzie, said most of his customers feel the regional district has become too powerful and is overstepping its bounds.

"If there was an opportunity for Saanich to opt out of the CRD I would favor it very much," he said.

Vantreight said he has serious doubts about the usefullness of the CRD to Saanich.

"Right now I'm more in favor of pulling out of it (CRD) than staying in. And 99 per cent of the people who talk to me are in favor of pulling out too."

However, four other aldermen said they are dead set against any move to take Saanich out of the regional district.

Ald. Irene Block, Howard Sturrock, John Mika and Bob Cameron today rejected such a move.

Taking Saanich out of the CRD would mean an end to the important function of regional planning, they said.

Block and Mika said removing Saanich from the CRD would lead toward amalgamation.

"We've got five foolish aldermen so dedicated to mushrooming growth they see the CRD as an impediment and they want to get rid of it," Block said.

Ships stacked up awaiting berths

A pile-up of ships around southern Vancouver Island — mostly bulk coal carriers — is being caused by lack of berths in Vancouver harbor.

Four ships are at anchor at Royal Roads today.

They are the grain carrier Glory River and three bulk coal carriers, the Koho Maru, Japana and the Varvara.

The bulk coal carriers Rokkohsan Maru, the First Jay and the Golden Tulip have been anchored at Plumper Sound near Saturna Island for several days waiting to get into Roberts Bank.

Two men face charges after schoolyard fight

Two men will appear in provincial court charged with assault causing bodily harm after police broke up a schoolground fight in Saanich on Wednesday.

Saanich youth squad officers arrested the men, aged 19 and 20, at 3:15 p.m. on the grounds of Lambrick Junior Secondary School.

A 15-year-old boy was taken to hospital with a broken jaw and face cuts.

None of the participants were students or connected with the school.

Police said it was only a coincidence that it occurred at the school.

Scholarships of $5,400 won by city students

Two capital region women have each won $5,400 scholarships for their studies in housing and planning.

They are Jean A. Hyndman, 3868 Shelbourne, a master's graduate of University of British Columbia in community and regional planning, and Elizabeth Watts, 10966 Boas, Sidney, a master of landscape architecture from Utah State University.

The awards are for Canadian students studying towards master's and doctoral degrees in the social, economic, environmental, physical and mangement aspects of housing in the academic year just ended.

Sponsor is Canada Mortgage and Housing Corp., which made 51 of the awards worth $660,000 including renewals for previous winners. Scholarships include the cash stipend plus university fees, travel allowance and dependent support.

Three other B.C. winners were all from Vancouver.

Donato challenges McGeer stats

Victoria's chief crusader against the Vancouver Island-Mainland fixed link proposal has challenged Science Minister Pat McGeer's use of statistics.

Claudia Donato, who is fighting any bridge or tunnel proposal, said she has learned the government's own research group has revealed the Island's growth rate is actually declining and will continue to slow down.

Donato's research into population trends followed comments by McGeer April 10 in which he cited the Island's rapid growth rate as one reason for building a fixed link.

He quoted Central Bureau of Statistics (CBS) reports for his conclusions.

Donato said she has learned that CBS gets its information from the B.C. Research Council.

The council is an independent, nonprofit group registered under the Societies Act. It competes for research contracts and receives a grant from the provincial industry and small business ministry.

Don Phillips is the minister and a spokesman at the council said that normally Phillips would be chairman of the B.C. Research board of management.

But the spokesman said the chairman is McGeer.

Donato said McGeer is therefore using statistics from a research group he in effect controls.

Back in April, McGeer said CBS statistics showed the Island's population will be close to 600,000 by the end of the century, up from the estimated 1979 figure of 463,000.

In fact, CBS figures — compiled from B.C. Research information — predict the Island's population will be 581,021 by the year 2001, up 115,375 from the 1979 population of 465,646.

The figures represent a 24.8-per-cent total increase spread over 21 years.

Donato says the B.C. Research report states all projections are based on past trends.

The report states: "In areas where future development patterns are substantially different from past historical patterns, this projected population may not be realized.

"Changes in factors such as government policy, land use, zoning and development will affect future population growth rates."

In other words, just about any change in the current situation anywhere on V.I. could alter the growth rate.

B.C. Research says it calls its figures projections instead of forecasts to emphasize the difficulty of projecting population accurately.

Donato told an Islands Trust meeting here on the weekend any fixed-link proposal is totally unfeasible.

She told trustees the proposal is a ludicrous, financially incredible idea.

She accused promoters of profiting from speculation that the link might be built and the government of encouraging such speculation by allocating $100,000 for a pre-feasibility study.

She called for the Trust to take immediate action.

"The Gulf Islands have a great responsiblity to mobilize. Not only do they propose to drive across your face but if that development boom is allowed to happen, we'll all be moving over into your laps," she said.

Before the judge

A 44-year-old man charged with breaking into an Oak Bay home Wednesday morning was denied bail later in provincial court.

Paul Maurice Mowat, also known as David Thompson and Ken Collins, of 1521 Louise Place in Saanich, was charged with breaking and entering a residence at 180 Denison and remanded in custody until Friday after a bail hearing before Judge Lorne Pearce.

Oak Bay police arrested a man in bushes at 230 Denison after a woman was awakened by someone in her house. The suspect arrested had shoes but no socks on his feet but was wearing socks on his hands at the time, police said.

Two women and a man were jointly charged with robbery with violence in connection with the beating and hold-up of a 42-year-old man early Wednesday at Government and Yates.

Kirby Martin Hawksworth, 30, of 1988 Laitanen in Sooke, Laila Marie Stewart, 18, of Campbell River, and Kelly Anne Sawa, 19, of no fixed address, were remanded in custody until today for possible bail hearing and election of trial method.

Donat Fred Lamoges of Campbell River was struck from behind and held down while $17 and his bank book were taken.

A 26-year-old Kuper Island man was charged in connection with the May 22 shooting on Jackscrew Island.

John Robert Caro was charged with a May 21 breaking and entering on Mowgli Island and a breaking and entering the next day on Jackscrew.

He also was charged with using a shotgun during flight and pointing a firearm at James Grim.

Caro was remanded until Friday for possible bail hearing and election.

Two teenagers charged with breaking and entering were released but placed under curfews.

Charged with two counts of attempting to break into 1220 Duke on Monday were 17-year-old Landon Jack Gaunt, 1150 Tattersall, and 18-year-old Morgan Douglas Smith, 3220 Quadra.

Gaunt also was charged with breaking and entering 1042 Inverness, 1108 Rock, 3801 Quadra and 3785 Kathleen as well as attempting to break into 3671 Kathleen between May 3 and June 1.

Both were released on $500 recognizance, but Gaunt was ordered to obey an 8 p.m. curfew while Smith was placed on a 10 p.m. curfew.

Both were remanded until Friday for election.

Judge Pearce handed out a six-month jail sentence to 28-year-old Tyler John Sloan, who pleaded guilty to possession of stolen property.

Crown counsel Don Laughton said Sloan was the manager of a rooming house at 1720 Denman and had the keys to the rooms.

On May 22, Victoria police executed a search warrant and found a $450 television set, $70 speakers, and $20 in old coinage which belonged to someone else at the rooming house in Sloan's possession.

Sloan had a criminal record dating back to 1974 for common assault, breach of recognizance, breach of probation, breaking and entering, and possession of stolen property. He was still on a two-year probation imposed Aug. 1, 1978, when he was fined $400 for common assault and $100 for breach of recognizance.

Pearce also placed Sloan on 18 months probation.

"I think you need a short, sharp shock," Pearce told a 17-year-old before imposing a one-month jail sentence.

Rodney David Mathews, 485 Old Island Highway, pleaded guilty to possession of a stolen credit card and attempted fraud.

Court was informed Mathews was apprehended at Woodwards on May 24 with a credit card which was stolen during a break-in. Mathews told police he bought the card for $20 at the Bastion Inn.

Laughton said the youth was given a suspended sentence for theft March 19 this year and placed on a year's probation.

A 43-year-old man appearing on his third drinking-driving conviction was given a six-month jail term with a recommendation the sentence be served at the Alouette River unit for the rehabilitation of alcoholics.

John William Charles Shea, 250 Belmont, pleaded guilty to impaired driving May 26.

Shea was spotted about 12:20 a.m. driving on the grass at Gyro Park in Saanich.

He had been convicted of driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 on Jan. 5, 1979, and fined $50, and of impaired driving Feb. 28, 1979, when he was fined $400.

Defence lawyer Chris Brennan said his client was not the driver who got the vehicle stuck but offered to drive it out.

Fined $300 for impaired driving was 27-year-old Kenneth Michael Paul, 2930 Washington.

Accused man dumped pipe, nurse testifies

A second witness told a B.C. Supreme Court jury Wednesday she saw 45-year-old William Lloyd Christie carrying a long object wrapped in Christmas paper Dec. 23 in Victoria General Hospital.

Registered nurse Helen Keegan was testifying at the third day of the trial of Christie, William Richard Johnson, 34, and Ardiene Elizabeth Langer, 35, accused of attempting to murder patient Terry Adams by striking him with a pipe and intentionally wounding him.

A third witness, patient James McDonald, 53, said he also saw a long object wrapped in Christmas paper. He would not swear in court that the man carrying it was Christie but he appeared similar.

On Tuesday, registered nurse Stephen Smith said he saw Christie, accompanied by Langer and Johnson, carry a long slender object covered in Christmas wrapping into the room occupied by Adams and saw Christie come out of the room with eight inches of a chrome pipe exposed and the rest covered in cardboard and Christmas wrapping.

Keegan said she was at the nurses station on the second floor when she saw three people go by. She identified Christie and Johnson as the men and couldn't positively identify the woman but she looked like Langer.

She said Christie carried what looked like a roll of Christmas wrap 2½ to three feet long. She did not notice which room the trio entered. Two or three minutes later, a voice called "stop that man he has beat one of our patients with a pipe."

Keegan said she saw Christie coming towards her carrying a cardboard tube with a pipe sticking out. He left the building and she followed, joined by a commissionaire.

At the far end of a parking lot, she said Christie dumped the pipe, then dropped the cardboard tube.

McDonald, in hospital for heart surgery, said he was standing in a doorway when he saw two men and a woman coming along the corridor. The larger of the two men, whom he described as a tall robust outdoor type, carried a Christmas-wrapped present and it was 2½ to 3½ feet long.

They went into a room in the vicinity of Adams room but he couldn't swear it was that room.

Then the larger man came past him again and put what looked like a piece of chrome into the package. The protruding piece was perhaps 12 to 14 inches long.

McDonald said Johnson was the second man he saw and Langer was similar to the woman he saw but he would not swear she was the same person.

Dr. Michael Hunt, who attended to Adams, said the man had a three-centimetre swelling and a two-centimetre laceration on the top of his head which was stitched, a three-centimetre swelling behind the left ear, a three-centimetre swelling on the forehead with a laceration not requiring stitches, a red welt diagonally across his chest from one side to the other, a four-by-six centimetre swelling on the left forearm and a one-centimetre stitched laceration on the left little finger.

He said the injuries were most consistent with being caused by a blunt rather than a sharp instrument because all the lacerations except one were on top of swellings. A sharp instrument causing a laceration does not usually cause swelling, he said.

Hunt said a forceful blow to the head is potentially a very serious injury because of the danger of bleeding inside the skull which has little room for expansion. The blood was released at the expense of the brain which was compressed.

If this persisted, he said, it can lead to a serious injury or death.

In cross-examination, he said "not necessarily" when asked if injuries such as he saw would result in immediate death. His qualification was that if someone was struck forcefully on the head, the possibility of serious injury or death was there, and Adams had a lesion which indicated he was struck with considerable force.

Hunt said the head injuries will not result in death but the fact that a lesion was caused by force meant the contents of the skull were subjected to injury which could cause death, from less of an injury than the one he saw.

But he did not know for certain if the contents of the skull were injured. There was a possibility of the brain being injured. But the injuries he saw would not normally cause death.

Tillicum to court June 23

The decision on whether the Capital Regional District can control the size of the controversial Tillicum shopping centre will go to court June 23.

The CRD Wednesday rejected a proposal by Saanich that the developers, Cal Investments Ltd., appear at a public meeting to outline their proposal and seek regional approval to build a 495,000 square feet shopping centre.

The Saanich proposal said any decision at such a meeting would not be binding on any party.

Some directors said a meeting would be a waste of time but Central Saanich Mayor David Hill said he would like it to be held in order to get all the facts.

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier said there is no legal way the municipality can reinstate a restrictive covenant to limit the shopping centre to 295,500 square feet.

But board chairman Jim Campbell said he has been told there is a way this can be done.

"The issue is, where do the customers to make it (Tillicum) a success come from, and who is injured in that process,"

Saanich director Howard Sturrock said: "I feel this matter has to be determined in court. The question that bothers me is not so much one of whether a 495,000 suare-foot centre is a good thing or not, but whether matters of this magnitude should be referred to the board."

Directors discussed Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm's proposed new provincial planning act which makes provision for an impartial board to review such impasses as the Tillicum issue but Victoria Mayor Bill Tindall said it will be some time before the legislation is approved.

Tindall agreed it could be advantageous to have a presentation from Cal Investments but said it should have been made six months ago.

Directors agreed to have an in-camera meeting next Wednesday so the CRD's solicitor can outline what legal action is contemplated.

Campbell said there is no legal way Saanich directors can be banned from the meeting but both Couvelier and Sturrock said they will not attend.

Saanich's third director, Ald. John Mika, was not at Wednesday's meeting.

Improvements for Camosun billed at $7.3M

Spending of an estimated $7.35 million has been proposed for new building, grounds improvement and repairs at Camosun College campuses over the next five years.

Most of the money — $6.6 million — would be for new teaching accommodation and core facilities at the Interurban campus.

The work would start in 1984, says a five-year projection prepared by the college facilities and planning committee.

The next largest amount, $400,000, would cover part of the cost of restoring the facade of the original Young Building at the Lansdowne campus.

Major work is required to halt deterioration of masonry.

An extension of the Foul Bay parking lot next year will need $200,000 and include improved access and screening of the site from Foul Bay.

About $100,000 is being earmarked to complete landscaping of the Lansdowne campus.

The work would include a new pedestrian area called the Hub, between the Young Building and the new multi-purpose Fisher Block.

The remaining $50,000 would go to a facilities plan with the emphasis on Interurban campus.

Camosun directors have been asked by Saanich to provide more offstreet parking to relieve congestion on residential streets, a problem also felt by Oak Bay on the opposite side of Lansdowne campus.

Chairman Janet Baird said it is possible the college will lower student parking fees to encourage greater use of the lots.

But she said she does not think the board can agree to a Saanich request to keep all the existing off-street parking stalls.

Some of the spaces are earmarked for landscaping, she explained.

Cost jumps 50 per cent just to study sewage

Capital Regional District directors voted Wednesday to recommend the board approve a 50 per cent boost in engineering fees for a study on disposal of sewage sludge from the Sidney and Central Saanich treatment plants.

"The engineers win again," commented Victoria Ald. Bob Wright, chairman of the CRD's solid waste management committee.

Wright said he would like to know how much the CRD has spent on engineering studies over the past few years.

"We could probably send our sewage to the moon cheaper," he said.

In 1979, Willis, Cunliffe and Tait said the study for the Sidney and Central Saanich project would cost $41,000 with an additional $7,000 for regional district engineers' time.

Wright's committee was told Wednesday that the new cost estimate is $59,080.

Directors were told the regional district must have a satisfactory method of sludge disposal before the Pollution Control Branch will give a permit for extension of the two plants.

Board chairman Jim Campbell said the PCB should set standards so that applicants know what is required.

"The director says you must do it in a way that is satisfactory to him and he won't, in advance, tell us what is satisfactory.

"In order to stay ahead, we have to guess at his expectations and spend enough money to stay ahead and be on the safe side."

Dump paved for sewage?

The Capital Regional District is considering paving two acres of land at Hartland Road to solve the problem of disposing of waste from septic tanks.

A wall would be built and the paved area used to compost the septage.

The CRD was told a year ago it could not continue to use the Hartland dump because there is a danger of the dykes around the existing lagoons collapsing. Sewage also was leaking into surrounding water courses.

Repeated efforts since then have failed to find a new site. Sites were suggested in View Royal, Esquimalt and Metchosin but objections by neighbors resulted in the regional district retreating.

A suggestion was made to the CRD's solid waste management and sewage disposal committee on Wednesday that Central Saanich farmland might be available but chairman Bob Wright said neighborhood reaction would probably be the same.

Regional engineer Norman Howard was asked to report on the Hartland Road proposal at the next committee meeting.

Each traffic light paying surcharge

Even traffic lights are being billed for the special hydro surcharge to pay for transit in the Capital Regional District, Mayor Bill Tindall said Wednesday.

It means taxpayers are getting hit two or three times to pay for the buses. Residential users of electricity have to pay $12 a year extra on their bills.

Commercial users have been hit with an extra $90 per meter, and the city has a separate meter for every one of more than 100 traffic lights.

Tindall said it costs the city $20 a year for electricty to run each light, plus $90 for the transit surcharge.

Besides the hydro surcharge, all B.C. residents contribute more towards the transit deficit out of general revenues. The surcharge covers only one-quarter of transit losses. The provincial government picks up the remaining three-quarters.

Many businesses have also complained about the surcharge as they have more than one electric meter.

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm has promised to amend legislation to eliminate the problem.

Prof cleared on one count

VANCOUVER (CP) — A county court jury was instructed Wednesday to acquit University of B.C. ecology professor Dr. Julius Kane on one of seven counts of theft and fraud in his use of federal funds.

The jury trial will continue with the remaining counts.

Kane is charged with using a National Research Council (NRC) grant and a grant made under a provincial government student employment scheme to hire two students for personal business purposes rather than the purposes for which the grants were given.

He is accused of charging up the salaries of Arlene Francis and her husband Bruce Wilson to the research council grant and with making false representations to the provincial government in connection with the number of hours each worked on a project authorized under that grant.

Kane was also accused of defrauding the NRC of about $300 by making false representations to the NRC in a statement-of-expenditures document.

Judge A. A. Macdonell, on an application by defence counsel David Roberts, told the jury to acquit Kane on the count relating to the NRC document because there was no evidence the money the Crown says the accused obtained was taken — if it was taken — on the date stipulated in the indictment.

The Crown said Wilson was hired by Kane under the NRC grant which was to be spent on research into interacting populations, and by the provincial make-work grant to assist him with a media-event project named "Waterflame Productions."

Wilson testified Wednesday that during his three weeks working for Kane he assisted him with his business affairs such as typing a portion of a novel into the UBC computer system, making phone calls in connection with Kane's real estate interests, typing two of his accounting projects into the computer and running errands. But, he testified, he did no work connected either with research or with "Waterflame Productions."

He testified Kane later asked him to sign a provincial government grant form listing the number of hours Kane was claiming he (Wilson) had worked on the Waterflame project. He told the court he felt the time claimed was misleading.

"But it was made very clear to me that what was going on in connection with the grant was none of my business. When I queried him about my having to sign it Dr. Kane became angry. I decided it was the better part of valor to do what I was told and I signed it," said Wilson.

Wilson later went to the RCMP.

The trial continues.

Man fit for trial

NANAIMO (CP) — A 20-year-old Nanaimo man was found mentally fit to stand trial Wednesday on charges arising from the death of a child in a house fire May 19.

A psychiatrist's report said Gary Wayne Dahl is fit to stand trial on charges of second-degree murder, arson and criminal negligence.

Dahl was charged following the death of nine-year-old Tanya Moon.

No promise of mine ban

The provincial government cannot make a decision on whether to permit mining on Gambier Island until it receives an application from someone wanting to open a mine, Attorney-General Allan Williams said Wednesday.

Williams made the remark after meeting with a delegation of Gambier Island ratepayers, who want the government to ban mining development on all 13 islands in the Islands Trust.

Elspeth Armstrong, delegation spokesman, said the minister could offer them no assurance that mining would not be allowed to go ahead on the island.

"It's not my decision to make and there is no application to open a mine on Gambier Island," Williams said in an interview.

"There will be no decision with regard to whether there will be mining until an application is made."

Concern about possible mining on Gambier Island mounted last year after Twentieth Century Corp. of Vancouver, which has mineral claims on three-quarters of the Howe Sound Island northwest of Vancouver, said it has found some copper and molybdenum deposits there with traces of gold and silver. The ore deposits have been estimated at about 280 million tons.

Ms. Armstrong said Gambier Island ratepayers take the position that an open pit mine, which they say would be necessary to make mining economical, would be contrary to the Islands Trust Act, which promises to preserve and protect the environment of the islands.

Williams said it has not been decided whether any mining act would take precedence over the Islands Trust Act.

Lumbering slump ends

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The slump in lumber industry employment in B.C.'s north seems to have halted, says an official of the Council of Forest Industries in B.C.

Van Scoffield of the council's northern Interior lumber sector said lumber shipments reached 78 per cent of normal during this week, up from 75 per cent last week.

Two portraits in murder case

NANAIMO (CP) — A nine-man, three-women jury was to be asked today to choose between two portraits of Dean Thomas Langford, the 25-year-old Campbell River man charged with second-degree murder in the July, 1979, stabbing deaths of two Gold River women.

Crown counsel Dennis Murray told the jury in a B.C. Supreme Court trial Wednesday that Langford is "a person who got mad and killed two girls intentionally" and showed no regret for the act.

But defence lawyer Jim Vilvang said Langford is an easy-going, generous, ordinary man who lost self-control under provocation and should only be convicted of manslaughter.

Mr. Justice Howard Callaghan is expected to deliver his charge to the jury today.

A second-degree murder conviction would mean an automatic life sentence, with no parole for at least 10 years or as long as 25. Sentence on a manslaughter conviction could range from probation to life.

The two women, Christine Beatrice Thomas, 26, and Helena Rose Howard, 16, were stabbed on a logging road near Gold River in July last year after Langford picked them up near Courtenay.

Vilvang has called no witnesses so far in the trial.

Stabbing victim identified

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Daniel Johnston, 18, of Stoneham, Que., has been identified as the man found stabbed to death in a park in this north coast community, RCMP said today.

Police said a suspect was in custody.

Your RCA dealer invites you to preview ColorTrak for 1981, unquestionably the finest color TV RCA has ever produced. He'll impress you with technological advances like RCA's space-saving tinted-phosphor Super AccuFilter 100 picture tube, exclusive new Detail Processor and Infrared Remote Control.

And he'll demonstrate ColorTrak's many other proven features, such as Automatic Contrast/Color Tracking — one-knob control for perfect contrast, brightness and color tracking. Automatic Color Control and Fleshtone Correction for consistently lifelike color from program to program, channel to channel. An Automatic Light Sensor that adjusts your picture to changing room light. The XtendedLife chassis that combines outstanding performance with low power consumption and long life (the most powerful set that RCA produces uses an average of only 113 watts!) And on many models, RCA's Dual Dimension Sound System which simulates the dimensional realism of stereophonic sound.

Your purchase of a 1981 RCA ColorTrak TV is a long-term investment in quality — the kind of quality that has made RCA television first by far in Canada.

Come in now to your RCA dealer's showroom and choose your new TV while the selection is at its best.

RCA's exclusive Detail Processor

Brings color pictures to life with a clarity never before achieved by RCA. A computer-like memory device separates detail from color so that color streaking and crawling edges (as often seen, for example, on checkered clothing) are virtually eliminated. RCA's exclusive vertical peaking system sharpens outlines to make images appear almost three dimensional. See the difference for yourself.

New Infrared ColorTrak Remote Control

With touch-button ease you can select any VHF or UHF channel either directly or by scanning up or down, stopping only at the channels you have programmed. Turns set on and off and adjusts or mutes volume. Pre-set volume insures that sound level will come back on where you left it. Channel number and time light up briefly on the screen when channel or recall buttons are touched.

Surprise ending by Crown

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Crown has abruptly concluded its B.C. Supreme Court case against 10 radio and television stations charged with violating the Combines Investigation Act.

The move Wednesday appeared to surprise defence lawyers, who were expected to argue the Crown has failed to prove its case and that the charges should be dismissed.

The stations and six individuals are charged with conspiring to unduly lessen competition in the sale or supply of broadcast advertising time in B.C. between June 30, 1976 and Dec. 1, 1977.

Guild may appeal

VANCOUVER (CP) — An appeal is being considered against an arbitration decision that rejects a claim of higher pay for editorial staff of Vancouver Sun and Province.

The Vancouver-New Westminister Newspaper Guild, which had sought pay raises for about 225 employees on the two daily newspapers because of changes arising from introduction of a computer system, said in a statement Wednesday it is unhappy with the decision reached by San Francisco lawyer John Kagel.

The 46-page decision released Tuesday said the computer system substantially changed the function of only four job classifications. Union leaders estimate only 40 to 50 employees will be eligible for compensation under Kagel's award.

Training urged

KELOWNA (CP) — A coroner's jury inquiring into the death of a 15-year-old youth from nearby Westbank has recommended all B.C. high schools offer mandatory driver training programs.

James Wilson suffered severe head injuries April 26 when he was tossed off the hood of a car when the vehicle stopped. The youth, who had been riding on the hood, died three days later in hospital.

Confidence vital

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — The federal government has to revive consumer confidence in the economy before the housing industry can get back on its feet, the president of a national construction industry organization said Wednesday.

And that confidence will continue to evaporate until escalating mortgage and other interest rates are curtailed by government legislation, said George Frieser, of Edmonton, president of the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada.

Protest planned

KELOWNA (CP) — The Kettle Valley Railway Heritage Society says it will hold a mass protest rally Saturday, set up picket lines outside Premier Bill Bennett's constituency office here and block work crews who try to demolish the small Okanagan rail line.

The announcement follows the provincial government's refusal Tuesday to provide between $25 million and $30 million from the Heritage Trust to save the CP Rail track for use as a tourist line.

Weatherman's favors needed by tennis clan

That sprinkly weather better improve in a big hurry or a whole lot of tennis players who had planned to be mighty busy this weekend are going to be upset.

Not only are we officially kicking off the seventh annual Victoria Times Public Parks Tennis tournament — which this year is bigger than ever — but there are Island tournaments and club championships ending and starting plus the two-day B.C. high school tennis championships all going on.

Times Tourney players have lots of time. They get almost a couple of weeks to play their first-round matches and all summer before their events wind up. But other tournaments have to go this weekend.

The three Victoria entries — Mt. Doug, Oak Bay and St. Michael's University School — all have excellent chances of the team title in the provincial high school championships, being co-ordinated by Russ Ball and and Scott Braley, hosted by Esquimalt High and played on some 30 courts in 11 different locations in the city.

Five boys and five girls make up each team for the round-robin play the first day followed by a double-knockout system the second. Oak Bay, with Kelly Davies and Val Brice, has a particularly strong girls' team.

Play begins at all locations at 9 a.m. Friday, goes all day and continues at 9 Saturday morning with the finals set for 3:30 p.m. at the University of Victoria.

Anyone wishing to take in a couple of really good men's singles matches tonight could pop up to the Racquet Club, where the club championships are down to the semi-finals. At 6:30, Peter Smythe, just back from attending the University of Oklahoma, will play top junior Dale Willard, winner of the last Island men's title. In the other semi, pro Russ Hartley will play another promising junior, Gerald Young. Finals are set for 11 a.m. Saturday.

The Oak Bay Tennis Club's annual championships get under way Saturday. They run all week with the finals slated the following Saturday.

It's certainly going to be a hectic weekend of tennis for the players involved in those two club events and who still are in the Open Island tournament, which has been trying to wind up on the grass at the South Cowichan Lawn Tennis Club in Cowichan Bay for the last two weekends but hasn't been able to.

Rain has kept officials at the Cowichan tourney from getting their events wrapped up but they hope to do it this Saturday and Sunday.

Still on the racquet sports scene, I joined the hordes of others flocking in last Saturday for a look at the new facilities at the Quadra Courthouse. The new club, which will sign up members as well as make its courts available to the public, is located on Quadra at the old winery, next door to the Keg restaurant.

A big attraction during Saturday's open house was the well-equipped exercise room, obviously a joy to Quarda Courthouse manager Dennis Smith, who until recently was in charge of the municipal fitness program at the Crystal Pool.

While there, I had a game (we won't call it an exhibition!) of squash with club president Bob Bell of UVic's physical education department (and we won't talk too much about that, either) and I must say they are fine courts.

Once you get used to the feeling that someone is looking over your shoulder (through the glass back wall), that is.

It's been years since I last played on one of the wider international-size courts in New Zealand . . . And I can tell you, when your legs are getting a little older all the time, that extra couple of feet or so seems an awful long way!

Wayne Gretzky wins Hart, Byng awards

EDMONTON (CP) — The Journal says Wayne Gretzky has won both the Hart Trophy as the National Hockey League's most valuable player and the Lady Byng Trophy as the player best combining ability and sportsmanship.

The Edmonton Oilers' high flying centre is, at 19, the youngest player ever to win either award and only the fourth in league history to win both awards the same year.

"This makes me pinch myself just a little bit . . . sometimes I don't believe all this has happened to me," Gretzky said after being told of the dual award by Oilers owner Peter Pocklington late Wednesday.

The official announcement is to be made late today. The winners are chosen by a vote involving three writers from each NHL city.

Times net tourney is off and a record

By MAX LOW

The seventh annual Victoria Times Public Parks Tennis tournament is off and running and once again we've got a record entry.

Times public parks tennis tournament draw is on page 17

There are a total of 263 entries, including an incredible 131 for the men's singles event!

That breaks the mark of 255 entries set two years ago and equalled last summer and the men's field is three more than the record of 128 players who took part in 1978. There were 118 in the men's draw last year.

One of the pre-tourney favorites for the men's singles is Rick Folk, runner-up to double winner Kerry Chan in the junior boys' event last year. Rick was most impressive in his final but also back is Larry Mais, who was beaten by Kerry in the men's final.

Others expected to fare well in the massive field are Perry Evans, junior boys' champ a couple of years ago, and Kerry's older brother Lorne Chan, a semi-finalist last year.

Folk, who is still only 17, is a hot favorite in the field of 39 in the under-18 boys' event.

Former champions are not eligible to enter the same event again and so that keeps Kerry Chan out of both the men's and boys' singles. But he's back with his talented young partner Charlayne Joe bidding for the only title he hasn't won — the mixed doubles.

They will find a lot of tough competition, though, from the rest of the 36 pairs entered, particularly from Rob Oldfield and his partner former club and intercollegiate player Lori Barlow, and from youngsters Jay Wilson and Cory Aspden, who made the mixed final a couple of years ago.

Janine Prince, junior girls' champion last year, has a good chance in the women's field of 41 entries, along with Carolyn Jones, twice a semi-finalist, and another couple of former juniors — Charlayne Joe and Kathy Meredith.

Post cards are being mailed out this week informing one player involved in each match the name and phone number of his or her opponent. The player receiving the card will be responsible for contacting the opponent, providing balls, arranging a mutually-suitable public parks court to play on and, after the match, for filling in the result and mailing or bringing the card back into the Times newsroom.

All first-round matches must be played and the results back into the Times by 5 p.m. Saturday, June 21.

Early matches in the tourney are of one pro set with the winner being the first to reach nine games. A tiebreaker, if necessary, is to be played at 8-8 to produce a 9-8 result.

Semi-finals and finals in all five events will be best of three sets to six and will be played on our windup weekend Aug. 23 and 24 on Oak Bay's Henderson Park courts.

Prizes will go to the winners and runners-up in the five events and there will also be a bonus of a new tennis racquet, courtesy of Centre Court Racquets in the Stadacona Centre on Pandora Avenue, to each champion plus a smaller prize to each player finishing second.

Feds to help athletes

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — The federal government will put up $1.5 million so that Canadian athletes who miss the boycotted 1980 Moscow Olympics can compete in other international events, says Gerald Regan, the federal minister of fitness and amateru sport.

Regan, here Wednesday for an annual sports recognition banquet, said the money will be given to 16 governing bodies for different sports in Canada. It could be used either to send competitors abroad or to pay for international competitions held in Canada.

Duch debut just amazing

By BILL WALKER

It was typically Nanaimo-Victoria — rough, sometimes chippy, with a lot of feeling and great goalkeeping.

But Wednesday as Victoria Shamrocks defeated Nanaimo Timbermen 9-6 in a Western Lacrosse Association game at Memorial Arena, there was one basic difference.

The goalkeeping! It wasn't only great, it was often sensational.

And it wasn't the usual Mac Maude (for Nanaimo) and Larry Smeltzer (for the Rocks), two of the best, either.

No, both coaches came up with something new and it worked, especially for Shamrock rookie Mike Duch.

He was only amazing in his first ever start as a senior goalkeeper and yet only slightly better than his counterpart and former Shamrock, Scott Marshall of the T-Men. They put on that kind of a game.

Coach Earl Nicholson of the Timbermen explained that he was going to alternate his goalkeepers through the season, which was why Marshall was starting.

Shamrock coach Joe McCrea thought perhaps Nicholson was using a psychological ploy, putting Marshall in against his old mates, but said he had decided to use Duch because: "I think he'll get the job done. Besides, there's no way he's going to learn anything sitting on the bench." Smeltzer had started all the previous Shamrock games with Duch seeing limited duty in the last Nanaimo game here.

Afterwards, Duch said: "All I wanted was that chance to play.", and he admitted he was quite surprised at the result.

And what a result it was.

For Duch started with a bang. He beat Ron MacNeil on a break early in the game, among other stops, and then stopped Doug Angrove on another break, and both of these came when it seemed Nanaimo was about to assume control. After that he just got better.

So good was he, that he blanked the T-Men for the first 30 minutes and 43 seconds, before Ken King of the visitors decided enough was enough and scored twice, three minutes apart.

At the other end of the floor, Marshall was almost, but not quite, as spectacular. He allowed the Rocks only one goal by Kevin Alexander in the first period and it was still only 1-0 at 9:43 of the second period when Chris Hall got the Shamrocks second goal.

That was followed by a goal by Jim Lynch, his first of two, just 20 seconds later, and it appeared then the flood gates might open.

They bulged, but that's all, as both clubs went on the offence; and when the second period ended it was 5-5.

In the third period Duch took over again — over-all he stopped MacNeil nine times and Angrove and Brian Evans six times each — while the Irish managed to get three more from Tarey Pollock, Jim Boyd, his first of two, and Dave Thomson. Meanwhile, Duch barred the door until MacNeil scored at 13:09.

That was to be all for the T-Men, Boyd putting the game on ice at 15:29.

Both Duch and Marshall made 48 saves, Duch being particularly sharp in the first period as he stopped 24 shots. Marshall was only two behind with 22. And that set the pattern.

Lynch and Boyd, with two goals, paced the Rock shooters while singles went to Pollock, Hall, Thomson, Rick Baker and Alexander. Webster and Alexander each had three assists.

King and MacNeil each had a pair for Nanaimo with singles going to Ted Greves and Evans.

Victory left Shamrocks four points behind Coquitlam Adanacs whom they meet twice next week — Monday at Coquitlam and Wednesday here.

Tonight in sports

Harness racing, baseball and softball are all on tap for local sports fans tonight.

A 10-race harness racing card gets underway with the parade to the post at 5:20.

The lone baseball game at 6:30 pits Lumberworld against Capital in a Victoria Cosmopolitan Senior League game at Lambrick Park.

All softball play starts at 6:30.

At Central Park, Tod Hackett faces Royal Oak in a Stuffy McGinnis Men's League game.

In the Victoria-Saanich Senior Women's League, Breakers take on Butler Bros. and Athletics meet Bemister's Welding at Hyacinth Park.

Capital tackles Ingraham in a Heywood Men's League game at Heywood Avenue Park.

Macdonald Men's League tussles place Mayfair Insurance against Labatts and Trafalgar Legion against Saints at Macdonald Park.

At Sanscha Park, Salties and Prairie Inn square off in a Sidney Men's Association tussle.

Rawlings and Strathcona meet in a Lower Island Association intermediate "B" women's league game at Topaz Park.

New Zealand team guarded

WELLINGTON (AFP) — The New Zealand Olympic team is under police protection after an athlete received a letter threat to "eliminate the traitors" who attend the Moscow Olympics.

It is believed the threat came from a Fascist group, the Patriotic New Zealand Organization, also responsible for a series of hoax letter bombs sent to the Soviet embassy in Wellington a month ago.

Risk's appeal denied

BALTIMORE (AP) — Tartan Farm's Codex, beating off the second challenge from Genuine Risk in 17 days, has been declared the winner of the 1980 Preakness Stakes.

The thoroughbred board of the Maryland Racing Commission voted 3-1 to uphold state stewards in disallowing a foul claim against Codex when the race was run at Pimlico Race Course on May 17.

Barring further action, the decision wiped out the chances of Genuine Risk becoming the first filly to win the Triple Crown. She won the Kentucky Derby, a race in which Codex was not entered. The two rivals will meet again in the Belmont Stakes on Saturday.

The decision of the panel, minus one member who disqualified himself because of published statements he made in favor of Genuine Risk, came after 2½ days of testimony.

The commissioners remained unswayed by television tapes, not available to the stewards, or by testimony by witnesses contending a foul had occurred.

Even Neil McCardell, who cast the lone vote to upset the stewards, indicated he had made up his mind without benefit of the outside evidence.

Stewards Fred Colwill, Clinton Pitts Jr., and Edward Litzenberger testified they had made the correct decision, even while admitting there may have been some slight contact and drifting by Codex.

"There was a bearing out, I had no doubt about that," said Kenneth Proctor in presenting the majority opinion for the board. "But this was a judgment call."

It's three against one: United States vs Borg

PARIS (AP) — For the first time in at least 25 years, three Americans have reached the men's semifinals of the French Open tennis championships, including the scrappy, consistent Harold Solomon.

Solomon, runner-up in 1976 and sixth seed this year, upset Guillermo Vilas of Argentina 1-6, 6-4, 7-6, 7-5 in a three hour, 39 minute match Wednesday at Roland Garros Stadium.

Vilas joined a number of top seeded players, lead by Americans John McEnroe and Billy Jean King, who have upset during this two-week tournament.

Bjorn Borg of Sweden, playing near-perfect tennis in his bid for a fifth men's crown, swept Corrado Barazzutti of Italy 6-0, 6-3, 6-3, and will meet Solomon in a semifinal match Friday that leads to the $53,000 men's title.

In the other semifinal, Jimmy Connors will face Vitas Gerulaitis in an all-American match. Along with Solomon, they are dreaming of becoming the first American to win the French title since Tony Trabert defeated Sven Davidson of Sweden in 1955.

Chris Evert Lloyd came from a set down to defeat Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia 6-7, 6-2, 6-2 in a fierce heat wave today to reach the women's final.

In the other semifinal, Virginia Ruzici of Romania downed Australian left-hander Dianne Fromholtz 7-6, 6-1.

Lloyd, the defending champion, is aiming to win the prestigious clay court title for the fourth time and is favored for the first prize of $42,000.

She scored her 33rd straight victory on clay, and her 158th out of 159 matches on such a surface, in defeating the Mandlikova.

After his upset victory of Vilas, Solomon was asked how many times he had played the reigning champion, Borg.

"Too many," said Solomon, who has yet to beat Borg.

Mutuel clerks settle

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — Parimutuel clerks at Yonkers Raceway have approved, by a 226-to-96 vote, a five-year contract designed to open the track and guarantee 354 jobs through 1984.

Four jockeys injured

RENTON, Wash. (AP) — Four jockeys were sent to hospital Wednesday when one horse fell and three others toppled over the animal in a 6½-furlong maiden race for three-year-old fillies at Longacres, track officials said.

The mounts were not seriously injured but all riders suffered broken bones.

Tex Hollingsworth suffered severe head injuries, possible concussions and a possible broken neck, said Longacres spokesman Kate Barton.

Jockey Cammi Baze suffered a broken right elbow and fractured her jaw, while Roger Pyfer and Dave Shepherd both suffered broken collarbones.

The accident occurred when Baze's mount, Mary For Mink, fell in the second race of the day's card, bringing down the other three horses, Barton said.

Winner of the race was C.C.'s Spirit, ridden by Bryson Cooper.

Carlton finds the way to silence Pirates, fans

By The Associated Press

Steve Carlton shut out the crowd by stuffing cotton in his ears — then he quieted Pittsburgh Pirates.

"It gets loud here, and it helps me concentrate," Carlton said after pitching Philadelphia Phillies to a 4-3 National Baseball League victory over the Pirates Wednesday at throbbing Three Rivers Stadium. "When the cotton's in, I can barely hear anybody."

Carlton's field expediency seems to have helped him — his latest victory was his 10th this season, tops in the majors.

Along with the noise control factor, a sizzling fastball doesn't hurt, either.

"This was the best fastball I've had all year," Carlton said after scattering seven hits.

Carlton thus has accounted for nearly half of Philadelphia's victories so far this year. The team has won 24 games over-all.

Pete Rose's two-run single highlighted a three-run fifth inning that helped the Phillies wipe out a 3-1 Pirate lead. Carlton struck out four and walked two, outdueling John Candelaria, 2-5.

In other National League action, Montreal Expos defeated Chicago Cubs 8-1, St. Louis Cardinals nipped New York Mets 1-0 in 10 innings, Houston Astros beat San Diego Padres 4-3, Atlanta Braves trimmed San Francisco Giants 7-2, and Cincinnati Reds defeated Los Angeles Dodgers 5-4.

Andre Dawson belted a three-run home run to snap a seventh-inning tie and Gary Carter followed with a solo blast to support the nine-hit pitching of Steve Rogers as Montreal defeated Chicago.

Rogers, 6-5, who walked three and struck out six, helped his own cause with a two-run single in the eighth off reliever Dick Tidrow.

In American League action, New York Yankees must be looking forward to the day when George Brett, who just wants to be remembered as a guy who always hustles, is an ex-player.

"I'd like to be remembered as a guy who played hard all the time," Brett said after he drove in four runs in the Royals 9-3 victory over the Yankees.

The third baseman had seven hits, including three home runs in as many days, and eight runs batted in during the three-games series between American League East and West division leaders.

Cole, LeCompte combine for Tally-Ho

Larry Cole came up with some standout pitching Wednesday to lead Tally-Ho to a 2-0 shutout over Juan de Fuca Builders in a Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League game at Central Park.

Cole struck out 11 batters and yielded no bases on balls while holding Juan de Fuca to two harmless singles by Marty Dunn.

Paul LeCompte drove in one run and scored the other.

At Heywood Avenue Park, Dale Ewasiuk slammed three home runs to drive in a total of four runs in three trips to the plate while sparking Knowles Realty to an 11-8 win over Strathcona Hotel in a Heywood Men's League game.

The Realty cause was also aided by six opposition errors and a solo homer from designated-hitter Don Frampton.

Ashley Douglass and Fred Henson chalked up solo round-trippers for Strathcona.

In the Sidney Men's Association, Dean Montgomery singled in Moe Turner with the winning run in the ninth inning as Travelodge edged Sidney Hotel 2-1 at Sanscha Park.

Al Stewart recorded the pitching win.

At Macdonald Park, James Bay Inn bombed Mega Power 10-3 and Coast Projects humbled Rebels 9-1 in Macdonald Men's League action.

In Victoria-Saanich Senior Women's League play at Hyacinth Park, Bea Henry cracked two hits, including a two-run triple, to drive in five runs and power Butler Bros. to a 17-10 decision over Strathcona Stingers.

Della Smith helped the Butler cause with a two-for-three batting effort.

In a Lower Island Association intermediate "B" women's game, Allman's Joy tripped Safeway 17-12 at Pemberton Park.

ENERGY AND MONEY SAVING CAR CARE TIPS

1 Tire Inflation
Properly inflated tires save fuel and run safer. Proper tire inflation also saves you money by helping you realize all of the built in mileage or kilometres you have paid for.

2 Wheel Balance and Tire Rotation
Properly balanced tires help eliminate spot tread wear and improve car handling. Tire rotation helps you realize the full potential of tire life.

3 Wheel Alignment
A precision front wheel alignment saves you money by eliminating irregular tread wear and by reducing excessive wear and tear on costly suspension parts.

4 Engine Tune-Up
It's a fact, a professional tune-up will save energy and provide greater overall engine performance and efficiency.

The "$5 Service Savings" offer good only at General Tire Service Stores and participating Independent Dealers displaying the General sign. Check first with your Dealer on services available at a particular location.

Six city players on nationals

Six Victoria players from the Vancouver Island Women's Field Hockey Association have been selected to the Canadian training squad and European touring side.

Sarah Angus, Lynne Beecroft, Jan Crook, Diane Mahy, Di Whittingham and Shelley Winter were picked for the 20-member squad, currently training in Toronto for an exhibition tour of West Germany and The Netherlands.

Canada plays five matches against Dutch teams June 15-22, faces the United States national team June 23 and then takes on West German teams June 28-29.

Merchants edge Capitals

Bob Godfrey came up with the only hit really needed to power Victoria Merchants of the Pacific Junior "A" Baseball League to a 3-1 decision over Capital Radiators of the Victoria Cosmopolitan Senior League in an interlocking game Wednesday at Lambrick Park.

Godfrey cracked a two-run homer in the first inning.

Ron Burton struck out six batters and yielded seven hits to pick up the pitching victory.

Lion receiver enjoying fine camp

COURTENAY, (CP) — Al Charuk says he's having the best training camp of his six-year career in the Canadian Football League.

And the 26-year-old wide receiver insists trade rumors during the off-season were purely coincidental to his obvious readiness before arriving at B.C. Lions' camp.

He said it didn't hurt his confidence when Lions made Simon Fraser University wide receiver John Pankratz one of their area protections from the Canadian college draft this year.

"We needed another guy to replace (Jim) Young anyway."

After the best season of his career in 1978 when he caught 51 passes for 790 yards and four touchdowns, Charuk's output last year was disappointing.

Playing with sore knees and at more than 190 pounds, he made only 33 catches for 515 yards.

"Nobody had to tell me I didn't play very well," he said. "For me to help the team I have to be 100 per cent every time. I have to concentrate."

He'd like to be a clutch player, the one called to make a crucial first down.

"I don't think I'm a game-breaker type like Lion (Bright) or Ty (Gray), but I think there's room for a receiver like me."

Chaurk said head coach Vic Rapp has assured him those trade rumors were not serious.

"I don't want to get traded. We've started a projects and I'd hate to get dumped off the boat before the project is complete."

So far, Charuk has had the surest hands at the camp.

Three-point field goal approved

CORONADO, Calif. (AP) — The National Basketball Association's board of governors has voted to make the three-point goal a permanent feature of pro basketball.

The rule, which gives three points for shots made from beyond an arc ranging from 22 feet to 23 feet, 6 inches from the basket, was tried on an experimental basis last season and was a popular success.

It was one of 13 rules changes and other proposals. All were approved.

Among the others, the board approved placement of red lights above the backboards that would be coordinated with the game clock to provide a visual aid for officials; banned players from wearing jewelry or other equipment or ornaments that could be dangerous to other players, and eliminated the word injury from the 20-second timeouts to avoid their abuse.

Sounders claim 10th straight

Times News Services

Seattle Sounders continue to roll along while the defending champion Vancouver Whitecaps keep heading in the opposite direction in the North American Soccer League.

Seattle won its 10th game in a row Wednesday with a 2-0 decision over Edmonton Drillers as substitute Mark Peterson and Roger Davies, the league's scoring leader, each got a goal to increase the Sounders' record to 12-1 in the National Conference Western Divison.

The Whitecaps, meanwhile, suffered their seventh loss in 12 games by dropping a 1-0 shootout to San Diego Sockers before 22,885 disappointed fans in Vancouver's Empire Stadium.

In other games, New York edged New England 2-1, Washington beat Philadelphia 2-1, Atlanta dumped Portland 2-1, Rochester topped San Jose 2-1, and California shutout Minnesota 1-0.

Peterson scored what proved to be the game-winner at 24:49, 1½ minutes after he entered as a substitute for Derek Smethurst.

Davies scored at 60:31, heading in a short pass from Ian Bridge of Victoria.

Davies now has 15 goals and four assists for 34 points, tops in the NASL.

Davies missed his second penalty shot in two games in the last minute of play, when Alaja made the stop.

In Vancouver, San Diego's second shootout victory of the season kept the Sockers 25 points behind California Surf in the race for the lead in the Western Division of the American Conference but the Sockers have four games in hand.

In absorbing their second loss in four shootout games this season, the Whitecaps dropped their second match to the Sockers in a game that belonged to the goalkeepers.

Both Volkmar Gross of San Diego and Bruce Grobbalaar of Vancouver made spectacular saves in the second half to keep the match scoreless.

The shootout wasn't decided until after 16 players had advanced toward the opposition goalie from the 35-yard line.

Julie Veee and David D'Errico, with the shot that decided the outcome, scored in the tiebreaker for San Diego while Alan Ball counted for Vancouver.

Giorgio Chinaglia scored his 11th goal of the season and Johan Neeskens got his first to lead New York Cosmos to their victory over New England.

Keith Furphy scored his second goal of the game with 5:30 remaining to lead Atlanta past Portland.

Laurie Abrahams's goal at 77:10 broke a scoreless tie and California Surf held on to edge Minnesota.

A bike to winner

There's still time to get in on the fun.

Tickets are still available for the combined Sweetheart and Junior fishing derby staged by the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association over two days starting at dawn Saturday.

The entry fees are $2 for women and $1 for juniors (aged 16 and under).

A bicycle donated by the Victoria Times goes to the junior catching the largest fish and women will be vying for a watch. Tickets are being sold at all Saanich Inlet marinas as well as at Robinson's, Gordon's, Ben Hill's and Royal Coachman tackle shops.

Trophies will also be awarded to the VSIAA members boating the largest salmon in each category and draw prizes will include two four-hour guided fishing trips.

Free refreshments will be provided for the windup Sunday at 1 p.m. at Anglers' Anchorage.

Further information may be obtained by telephoning 384-3290 or 479-5200.

Hole-in-one features B.C. Seniors tourney

NANAIMO (CP) — Vernon golfer Stan Gustafson was the first day hotshot at the B.C. Seniors Golf Championship which opened in Nanaimo Wednesday when he scored a hole-in-one at the 165-yard 17th.

However, Gustafson's ace did not placing him among the leaders, his 82 putting him six shots off the pace.

Sharing the lead after the first 18 holes are former Victorian Percy Barradell of Mission, Doug Bajus of Capilano and Herb Fritz of the Vancouver Club, with 76s.

Owen Ellis of Comox shot 77 to lead Island entries and Hugh Thorburn of Royal Colwood was top Victorian at 78.

The tournament continues today.

Telephone prescription linked to creek fatality

Prescribing drugs by telephone contributed to the death of a 20-year-old man who drowned in a North Saanich creek on March 29, a coroner's jury was told Wednesday night.

After an hour's deliberation, the Sidney jury concluded William (Billy) John Jones died by asphyxiation caused to drowning, and that he drowned accidentally because of his intoxication from the drug Elavil.

The jury also recommended the practice of prescribing drugs by telephone be reviewed.

The criticism of telephone prescriptions came as Victoria lawyer Christopher Considine cross-examined the principal witness, Jones' girlfriend Pamela Jean Brown, 2104 Skylark Lane, Sidney.

Soon after she began testifying, she asked for the protection of the Canada and British Columbia evidence acts to protect herself from self-incrimination.

Asked about how she got her drugs, Brown said she phoned a doctor and told him she was having trouble sleeping at night.

The doctor prescribed Valium and Elavil, telling Brown to take one pill of each kind every night. She picked them up at Sidney Pharmacy the afternoon before Jones died.

Brown balked when first asked by Considine to reveal the name of the doctor who gave the prescription the day Jones died.

But later when Coroner John Davidge told her to answer she identified him as "Dr. Groves" of Sidney.

Later she refused when Considine pressed for the names of other doctors whom Brown claimed also prescribed drugs by phone.

At first, Davidge sided with Considine against Crown Attorney Richard Law that Brown should answer.

In the middle of the legal arguments, Brown stated flatly: "I'm not going to answer the question. I'm sorry."

Considine then agreed with Davidge's suggestion that the point had been made: dangerous drugs, legally available only by prescription, are far too readily attained by phoning some doctors, and perhaps limits should be placed on the number of pills that can be prescribed at any one time.

Brown admitted having used a wide variety of drugs in her lifetime, ranging from marijuana to heroin.

She had been trying to stay away from drugs for some time, but emotional problems caused her to seek relief in pills.

On the night Jones died, she said she believes she had one beer and three kinds of pills — Valium, Elavil and Fiorinal, an analgesic and sedative.

"I was kind of eating them like candy."

Now 22, Brown said she began using drugs 10 or 11 years ago, when she started smoking marijuana.

She also said a former boyfriend from Victoria died from a drug overdose at Shawnigan Lake about a year ago.

Brown's recollection of March 27 was hazy.

"Most of the night was a total blackout," she said.

But her testimony basically matched earlier testimony by two Victoria men who went to a party at her basement suite the night Jones died.

She had picked Jones up at 10435 West Saanich Road and driven him to her home where she wanted him to install a tape deck in her car.

She opened two bottles of beer and later in the evening phoned to invite Ian Ramage and Brian Offer to a party.

They came with a bottle of vodka. Brown, Ramage and Offer all testified they drank the liquor, but no one actually saw Jones drinking it and no one was sure he'd even had any beer.

Earlier testimony indicated an autopsy had turned up no alcohol in Jones' system.

Brown said she did not see Jones take any pills the night he died.

Brown testified the only pills she had ever seen Brown take were two Valium capsules which he bought in the Sidney Hotel pub.

By the time her father yelled from upstairs to send her friends away, however, she said Jones was intoxicated.

The first inkling she had that something was wrong was two days later, on March 29, when Jones' mother, Mrs. Pauline Olund, phoned to ask for her son.

Mrs. Olund told Brown an Indian boy had been found on the airport field.

Brown said she was still on a high from drugs, and sometime after police questioned her about the party two days prior, she consumed all the pills she could find.

She was rushed to hospital that same day and not released until two days later.

Airwest cancels land-based flights out of Nanaimo

Airwest Airlines has cancelled its land-based service from Nanaimo's Cassidy Airport to Victoria, Qualicum and Port Alberni.

The cancellation takes effect immediately.

Airwest is the only airline operating out of Cassidy.

Its cancellations mean there are now no planes flying on a scheduled basis between Cassidy and the three points.

Airwest is continuing to operate in Cassidy with regularly-scheduled runs to Vancouver, Comox, Campbell River and Port Hardy.

It also operates charter flights from Cassidy.

The announcement follows a decision Wednesday to end seaplane service between Victoria and Seattle and between Vancouver and Seattle.

Company president Rusty Harris said the changes are in response to extensive market studies showing the public demand is for seaplane service involving three cities — Victoria, Nanaimo and Vancouver.

Up to now there have not been enough Twin Otters available to meet the demand for service on the Victoria-Vancouver run, he said.

With the changes, the company will be able to double the number of planes available on runs between Vancouver Island and Burrard Inlet.

Airwest has applied for the rights to seaplane service between Victoria and Nanaimo to complete the triangle.

Harris said the licences for the land-based service will be retained.

However, the Cassidy-Victoria planes which landed at Victoria Airport frequently had no passengers and the situation was not much better on the Cassidy trips to Port Alberni and Qualicum.

"The public demand is for downtown-to-downtown service," Harris said, and only seaplanes can satisfy that need.

The company hopes to develop a network of seaplane routes for major communities on the Island, including Port Hardy.

But the main emphasis will be on developing traffic between the Island and Burrard Inlet.

The company said no other reductions in service are planned.

A major factor in the decision to halt service to Seattle was the cost of a new lease at Lake Union, Wash.

It was considered to be too expensive, considering the limited revenues on the route.

The licences have been retained and the Seattle-Victoria route may be restored at some future date.

Frank Hertwig fills the half-cup gas tank for Antonio Roque

It's a 2,880 km/g car!

TORONTO (CP) — Three engineering students from Seneca College in Toronto have built a car they say will travel 32 kilometres on less than one-quarter of a cup of gasoline.

The builders say under the right conditions, and a speed of 25 kilometres an hour, the car could travel to Swift Current, Sask., from Toronto on an imperial gallon of super unleaded gasoline.

Frank Hertwig, 21, Tony Araujo, 22, and Antonio Roque, 24, who took six months to build the three-wheeled car, will get the chance to prove their 2,880-kilometre-a-gallon estimate on Friday in the first Shell Fuelathon in Canada open to student-built special vehicles.

The three are confident their creation will do well against cars entered by two groups of Shell Canada Ltd. employees and three other Ontario community colleges, Sheridan of Oakville, St. Clair of Windsor and Fanshawe of London.

One reason for their confidence is the power plant, a four-stroke, 50-cubic-centimetre Honda taken from a motorbike.

Ouellet still mum on PO pact

OTTAWA (CP) — The government refused for the third successive day Wednesday to disclose the cost of the new postal contract, a settlement opposition MPs say is unwisely and unncessarily extravagant.

Postmaster-General Andre Ouellet told the Commons the settlement means a 10.4 per cent increase in wages and benefits this year for the 23,000 members of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers.

But he did not answer a question from Walter Dinsdale, the Progressive Conservative post office critic, as to how much it would add to the post office budget and how it would affect the post office deficit.

"I notice he dodged Dinsdale's question on that," Sinclair Stevens, treasury board president in the former Conservative government, said later outside the Commons.

Stevens has been pressing the government for details of the contract for the last week.

Johnston and Ouellet have repeatedly put him off, saying they would not comment on details of the contract until it was ratified by treasury board. The board, which controls government spending, gave it that approval Tuesday.

It was Liberal Maurice Dionne, from the New Brunswick riding of Northumberland-Miramichi, who raised the matter in the Commons Wednesday.

Dinsdale, of Brandon-Souris in Manitoba, then rose for the Conservatives and asked about the total cost of the contract and whether plans to increase first-class postal rates "flow directly out of this rich settlement."

Ouellet answered only the second question. "It is certain that we must periodicially revise the tariff for various classes of mail," he said.

"This exercise is executed approximately every two years and I believe we shall continue with this tradition."

Ouellet, however, rejected opposition charges in general terms, saying the settlement "is in the best interest of all Canadians, it is very reasonable."

Johnston and Ouellet are to appear before the Commons miscellaneous estimates committee later this week and Stevens said plans to press them again on the matter then.

Under the contract a second-year postal clerk will make $8.95 an hour and a mail handler $8.80 an hour. But it has become a controversial political point as to what percentage those increases work out to.

The union says wage increases range from 7.9 per cent for mail dispatchers to eight per cent for postal clerks and 9.6 per cent for starting mail handlers.

Ouellet said the average wage increase is 8.1 per cent while cost-of-living allowances and other benefits bring the figure to 10.4 per cent.

Admiral's lavish life hits taxpayer

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is ripping off the taxpayer by paying about $100,000 a year in rent so that a Canadian admiral can live in opulent, self-indulgent style in Brussels, a Conservative MP said Wednesday.

Tom Cossitt told the Commons the $8,200-a-month rent paid for the home of Admiral Robert Falls, chairman of the NATO military committee and former chief of the Canadian defence staff, is an "outrageous example of ripping off the taxpayer."

In defence of the payments, the government responded with the statement that rents are rather high in the Belgian capital.

Cossitt, from Leeds-Grenville in Ontario, initiated a double-barrelled attack on the government over the rent deal.

First, he introduced a motion condemning the government for "permitting Admiral Falls to indulge lavishly in apparent lust for luxurious living beyond the bounds of common sense."

Cossitt demanded "a government statement on this opulent, elaborate self-indulgence which makes a literal lie of the government's pious, pompous urging of restraint."

The motion was greeted with laughter and jeers and did not get the required unanimous support.

Cossitt raised the issue again during the daily question period, asking the government how it could justify such spending when Canadians were having difficulty meeting rental and mortgage payments.

Ursula Appolloni, parliamentary secretary to the absent Defence Minister Gilles Lamontagne, brushed off the criticism, saying: "Rents are rather high in Brussels."

Mrs. Appolloni, MP for the Toronto-area riding of York South-Weston, said the city attracts a large number of foreign dignitaries, which serves to drive rents up.

But she said it is incumbent upon Canada to provide suitable accommodation for a man of Admiral Falls' rank.

"Neither a shack nor a lean-to are suitable for the man who represents the finest forces in the world," she added.

A spokesman for the defence department said later the rental agreement for the first year of the lease calls for payments of $81,816, or $6,818 a month.

He said the lease, which has an escalator clause to account for increases in the Belgian cost of living, is for three years and four months. Canada has an option to buy after that period or renew the lease for six more years. The lease was signed at the beginning of April.

Cossitt told reporters he based his calculation of the rent on this week's rate of exchange for the Belgian franc.

Pierre Morel, director of property management for the external affairs department, said the rent is in line with that paid for other diplomatic residences in cities such as Paris, London and Tokyo.

Morel, who was in Brussels with Falls when he was looking for a residence, said they were looking for a home suitable for his duties and activities, such as receptions.

The home is comparable to residences occupied by ambassadors, he said. It has a dining room to seat between 18 and 20 persons, a spacious living area and four or five bedrooms.

Cossitt distributed to reporters a copy of a Feb. 28 telex from Brussels to the government outlining the rent deal.

Que. dishes up Paris

MONTREAL (CP) — A consortium of Quebec cable television operators will set up a network of 35 satellite dish antennas to make programming from France available throughout the province.

The French programs, already seen in Montreal and 13 other centres on a delayed basis, are currently distributed to cable companies on microwave, but satellite transmission will allow them to reach the most remote corners of the province.

Use of dish antennas in this case is unlikely to cause the kind of controversy that has developed in British Columbia, where cable operators have used them to pirate pay television offerings from United States satellites.

Hotel chain backs cancer run

FREDERICTON (CP) — A one-legged runner has pledges of substantially more than $100,000 to fight cancer if he completes a planned cross-Canada run and his biggest backer wants to push the total to $10 million.

Terry Fox, a 21-year-old university student from Port Coquitlam, who lost a leg to cancer, hoped to raise $1 million for the Canadian Cancer Society when he set out from St. John's, Nfld., April 12 headed for Vancouver.

But now Four Seasons Hotels have pledged $2 a mile for each of the 5,000 miles Fox completes and the company has challenged 1,000 other firms to do the same.

''One thousand companies each pledging $2 per mile for Terry's cross-Canada run will raise $10 million to help defeat cancer,'' the hotel chain says in an advertisement in Maclean's magazine.

Already more than 20 per cent of the way from St. John's to Vancouver, Fox says he is tired and his stump hurts but he is determined to go on.

''After what I went through with my therapy and watching some of my friends die because of cancer, I had to do it,'' he said in an interview.

"I have the attitude that I'm setting an example. The people who have cancer cannot shut off the pain and I in turn cannot stop running for them.''

Parliament must decide remedy for UIC botchup

OTTAWA (CP) — Parliament must decide whether to remedy ''an obvious injustice'' to 13,500 elderly persons who were incorrectly cut off unemployment insurance benefits Jan. 1, 1976, says the Supreme Court of Canada.

In a judgment this week, the court said the 13,500 lost benefits totalling $23 million as a result of ''the injury . . . caused by the Unemployment Insurance Commission.''

Evidence showed the commission misinterpreted the effect of a new regulation involving the age of claimants.

The problem began in 1975 when Parliament decided persons over the age of 65 were no longer eligible for benefits. Previously, the age was 70.

The unemployment commission accordingly cut off 18,000 persons between the ages of 65 and 70 and urged them to apply for the pension plans, a lesser amount.

A group of 600 claimants appealed to the commission. It ruled that persons who had benefit periods established prior to Jan. 1, 1976, were not affected by the amendments and were entitled to continue receiving benefits.

Under this ruling, the commission reassessed the claims of all those who had appealed the ruling and paid them benefits until the end of their benefit period or until they received Canada or Quebec pensions.

But 13,500 claimants had not appealed the ruling within the required time period.

After widespread protests, Parliament agreed to lengthen the appeal period.

But many of the claimants had applied for and received pensions on the advice of the commission and that disqualified them receiving unemployment insurance benefits.

Their case was taken to the Federal Court of Appeal which ruled the commission could not cut off benefits when the claimant received a Canada or Quebec pension.

The Supreme Court said that, if the 13,500 had their benefits under the old act, they could not take advantage of the amendments allowing them to receive both jobless pay and pension.

Mr. Justice Louis-Philippe Pigeon said the courts were strictly required to apply the law as written and could not depart from their clear meaning even though Parliament in a special 1977 Act had intended to restore the lost benefits.

Judge Pigeon said he could not believe that Parliament would have extended the time for the claimants to appeal their lost benefits so they could be told by the commission they were still not entitled to them.

'Honest belief' queried in rape

OTTAWA (CP) — Justice Minister Jean Chretien said Wednesday the government is studying whether a man should be convicted of rape if he honestly believes his victim consented to intercourse.

Chretien told New Democrat Svend Robinson that his department is studying a recent decision of the Supreme Court of Canada which said honest belief is a legitimate defence.

Robinson, his party's legal critic, said the ruling could result in a serious injustice to all women.

His question in the Commons revolved around a recent Supreme Court decision that said a man must be found innocent of rape if he honestly believes the woman was consenting to intercourse. The defence would apply even if there were no reasonable grounds for that belief.

Chretien said the Supreme Court decision would be studied in the context of current plans to make major revisions in the Criminal Code. Those revisions are expected to take some years.

The ruling was made as the court upheld the conviction of Vancouver businessman George Pappajohn, convicted of raping his real estate agent several years ago.

Pappajohn argued he honestly believed the woman had consented to intercourse.

The court said that was a legitimate defence. But it also decided it had no reason to believe that Pappajohn honestly believed the woman had consented.

Opening lead — queen of spades.

Most players are taught early in life that they must never deliberately give declarer a ruff and discard. But, as with all general rules, there are times when this injunction should be violated.

Let's assume you're East and your partner leads the queen of spades. You overtake the queen with the king — just in case the queen is a singleton — and continue with the A-J. West discards a diamond on the third round of spades, and the question is what to do next.

Ordinarily you'd discontinue the suit, having in mind the prestigious ruff-and-discard bugaboo. However, in the present case, you should play a fourth round of spades!

There are bascially two reasons for doing this. The first is that a heart, a diamond or a club lead are all give-up plays that simply can't help your cause at all. The second is that you might be able to manufacture a trump trick for your partner that does not exist naturally, and in that way defeat the contract.

In the actual case, once you lead the fourth round of spades, declarer finds himself in a hopeless position. If he discards either a diamond or a club, or ruffs low, your partner ruffs with the nine and thus acquires an indestructible trump trick. South is in equally bad shape if he ruffs the fourth spade with the ten or the king. In either case, West would discard a club and thus guarantee himself a trump trick later on.

Note that if you fail to play a spade at trick four, South can bring the contract home by trapping your partner's queen of trumps. Note also that playing a fourth round of spades would be equally successful if West's trump holding were either the K-9-x-or J-7-4-3.

Clark won't join Trudeau for constitution talks, yet

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Joe Clark Wednesday dashed hopes of an all-party federal delegation at constitutional talks expected to flow from Monday's exploratory meeting of federal and provincial first ministers.

Clark told reporters following a meeting with Prime Minister Trudeau he wants to see "the traditional method" of first ministers' meetings given another try at rewriting the country's 113-year-old constitution before he is prepared to consider becoming part of the federal delegation.

He said he will await the results of Monday's closed-door meeting and possibly later sessions before deciding whether he should take part. In any case, he would want a role in working out federal proposals for constitutional reform before joining the government delegation.

The idea of involving the two oppositon parties in the federal delegation was proposed by NDP Leader Ed Broadbent the day after the May 20 Quebec referendum which rejected Parti Quebecois proposals for a mandate to negotiate sovereignty-association.

Broadbent said he hoped a non-partisan approach to the urgent issue of constitutional change would help break the federal-provincial deadlock that has stymied attempts at constitutional reform dating back to 1927.

Broadbent told reporters following a meeting earlier Wednesday with Trudeau he favors a July 1, 1981, deadline for rewriting the constitution.

Opposition parties should be part of the provincial as well as the federal delegations, he added.

Clark's decision appeared to rule out the possibility of Broadbent becoming part of a federal delegation because the NDP leader gave Trudeau a list of six conditions for his participation which included the stipulation that both he and Clark take part.

"If the traditional method doesn't work, it could well be worth taking a look at broadening the participation, not simply in presence at the table but in preparation of what goes to the table," Clark said.

Clark indicated little was discussed about specific constitutional issues. He had talked about his support for the provincial demand that equalization payments be made part of the constitution and repeated his position that the Yukon and Northwest Territories be included in constitutional talks.

He had also suggested the first ministers should identify areas of the constitution affecting native peoples so they could take part in the talks.

But Clark said there had been no specific issues discussed "in any conclusive way."

Cousin charged in child slaying

TORONTO (CP) — A relative of Elizabeth Jane Tomlinson was charged Wednesday with first-degree murder in the sex-slaying of the six-year-old girl.

Gregory Russell Guerin, 26, an unemployed laborer who lives just a few doors from the girl's family, was charged and being kept under guard in hospital after apparently taking a drug overdose, said Insp. James Crawford, head of the Metropolitan Toronto Police homicide squad.

Guerin, a first cousin of Elizabeth's mother Diane, served as a pallbearer at the girl's funeral.

Police, on the 10th day of an intensive search for the killer, said the arrest was the culmination of thousands of hours of investigation by hand-picked members from all parts of the force.

It came just two days after police said several top homicide investigators would be added to the team searching for the girl's killer.

Elizabeth, whose body was found May 26 in brush near a railway track, was last seen May 24 walking away from a playground with a tanned, bearded man.

Oil-test polar bear recovering

WINNIPEG (CP) — A polar bear that was near death in March after being submerged in oil as part of a scientific experiment is making good progress, a zoo official said Wednesday.

The bear, now active, is the only one of three bears to survive an experiment at Churchill, Man. in which the bears were put in oil to test their survival chances in an oil spill.

Dr. Graham Krawshaw, a veterinarian at Winnipeg's Assiniboine Park Zoo, said the bear, nicknamed Fossil, still has some superficial infections but is no longer on medication.

"She is presently out of danger, although the long-term effects will not be known for some months," he said. "She has by no means totally recovered but is doing very well."

Fossil, which has been under the zoo's care since March 25, is fed a regular diet of horse meat, dog food, bread and the odd carrot, and has gained "a great deal of weight."

Zoo officials said the future home of Fossil is still undecided. The other two bears used in the controversial experiment died after licking off and swallowing the oil coating.

China grain deal 1.4 million tonnes

OTTAWA (CP) — China has agreed to buy 1.4 million tonnes of Canadian wheat for delivery in the second year of a three-year agreement and will take some red winter wheat for the first time.

Senator Hazen Argue, minister responsible for the wheat board, told the Senate Wednesday he was "proud that we are able to maintain our market in China."

"It is excellent for our grain producers since it is one of the biggest markets in the world and it is continuing to look to Canada as a major supplier."

UAW doubts Toyota move

ANAHEIM, Calif. (CP) — An announcement of a feasibility study on locating Toyota car-production facilities in Canada was taken with a grain of salt Wednesday by Bob White, Canadian director of the United Auto Workers, representing about 135,000 union members in Canada.

"It's a first step but I think if you view the U.S. scene and talk to people who are knowledgeable, the fact they have been doing studies in this country certainly does not mean an immediate decision to locate a facility here," White told reporters.

"If the Japanese corporations act as they have in the past, it'll be a long time down the road."

He said such studies have been conducted in the U.S. for at least 10 years and all that has resulted is a small commitment from Japanese companies to produce some motorcycles and trucks in the U.S. in a small scale.

He said there is a possibility the chances of location in North America have grown considerably recently because of pressure from the auto union here and in Japan but he was not optimistic.

"They didn't have nearly the share of the market (10 years ago) so whether or not this feasibility study in Canada means major decisions in the near future remains to be seen but I seriously doubt it."

He made the remarks at the union's convention where leaders have called for Japanese loation in North America to offset the massive loss of jobs that is attributed to Japanese auto imports and to conversion by U.S. companies — General Motors, Ford and Chrysler — to small cars from large cars in the next few years.

White is starting his second term as Canadian director of the United Auto Workers Wednesday with a tough challenge ahead to protect his 135,000 union members from the devastating effects of unprecedented layoffs.

It's an onerous job but he says he's ready for it after two major tests of his leadership abilities since his election in April, 1978, to the dual position of Canadian director and an international vice-president of the 1.4-million-member union dominated by U.S. auto workers.

"The problems we had in the last two years will be comparably small to what's in the future," he told the nearly 300-member Canadian delegation to the UAW convention here.

Progress slow toward miners

VAL D'OR, Que. (CP) — Rescuers reported no major developments Wednesday in their persistent effort to reach eight men trapped in the Belmoral gold mine since May 20.

Quebec provincial police spokesman Camil Aube said mud and water was still flowing for the 10th consecutive day into the mine's main ramp from a network of tunnels at the 105-metre level, preventing crews from descending furthur to locate any of the men.

Three have officially been given up for dead, and there has been no indication if another five presumed to be in an air pocket at the bottom of the 150-metre deep mine are dead or alive.

Maureen McTeer will be appointed to the board of governors of the University of Ottawa. The Ontario government is expected to announce the appointment next week, a government spokesman said today. The bilingual McTeer, 28, graduated from the university's law school in June, 1977, and was called to the bar in April.

Vancouver Sun reporter Carol Volkart is one of two winners of the 1980-81 Louis St. Laurent Fellowships in legal journalism which are paid for by the Canadian Bar Association to help working journalists become familiar with the legal system. Brenda Kolson of Yellowknife is the other winner.

McTeer

When Sister Theresa Kane welcomed Pope John Paul II to Washington's Shrine of the Immaculate Conception last fall, she caused his annoyance and embarrassment with an appeal for admission of women to full ministerial rights in the Roman Catholic Church. Despite criticism, Theresa has continued to speak out, and she has predicted the church will have female priests within 20 years. Theresa was re-elected administrator of her order, the 5,000-member Sisters of Mercy and received the U.S. Catholic's 1980 award for her efforts to advance the cause of women.

In Leesburg, Fla., a pregnant woman jailed for driving without a licence was freed after four days when a judge relented in the face of mounting public pressure and concern the baby would come before the 20-day sentence ended. "I know I did wrong, but it's downright disgusting to send a pregnant woman to jail for driving without a licence," Shirley Dianne Willis said before leaving the jail. Willis, eight months pregnant, was released by judge Roy Caldwell who earlier said he didn't care what anyone thought about the 20-day jail sentence.

Bert Parks, who was ditched by the Miss America beauty pageant after last year's contest, has signed up with a new beauty partner, the Miss Young International pageant. Parks says he has signed a seven-year contract, at a fee he wouldn't disclose, to be master of ceremonies for the pageant which will be held in Manila on Aug. 17. and broadcast in North America on about 85 stations, according to pageant sponsors.

Dear Abby:

Some years ago, I was raped and became pregnant. I gave birth to a baby boy, but under the circumstances I couldn't bring myself to raise him. My best friend was happily married but wasn't able to bear children, so she and her husband adopted my son. That decision worked out well for all of us. I visited them often and watched the boy grow up in a fine environment.

Here's my problem: In Minnie's eyes, the boy is now old enough to understand the circumstances of his birth, adoption, etc., and they want to tell him the entire story. They think he has the right to know all the facts of his birth, including the fact that I am his mother and his father was a rapist! I would like your opinion.

Waiting

Dear Waiting:

Honesty is always the best policy. You don't say how old the boy is, but he should be told only as much as he can comprehend. Most young children can understand "adoption," but I question the wisdom of telling a child his father was a rapist.

Dear Abby:

I am married to a physician. We recently attended a medical convention where there were about 3,000 physicians present.

Maybe it's because lately we have all become so weight-conscious, but I was really shocked by the number of fat physicians I saw there. More than half the doctors were visibly overweight.

John's Wife

Dear Wife:

In a survey of 900 family physicians, sponsored by the American Academy of Family Physicians, 62 per cent who responded said they wanted to lose weight. More than one-third of that group wanted to lose more than 10 pounds, but 89 per cent said they had not followed a specific weight- loss diet in the last six months. Physician, heal thyself!

Dear Abby:

Melvin graduated from high school at the top of his class last June. He was offered a scholarship to a very fine university, but he turned it down to go to a local college. Everybody thought he was crazy. He admitted to me he didn't want to go away to college because he gets "homesick."

We sent Melvin to summer camp when he was 11, and he came back after one week so thin and pale he didn't look like the same boy. He said he got so homesick he couldn't even sleep or eat.

I want Melvin to go away to college this fall, but every time I bring it up he begs me not to talk about it. Should I push him out — or what? His sister and brother have all made the jump without this.

Melvin's Mom

Dear Mom:

If Melvin has not been evaluated by an expert, he should be. Don't push him out of the house, but do insist he have a frank talk with a doctor.

Symbol of care by all levels

By LON WOOD

The dividend of nearly three years' dedication to producing multi-level care for the region's aged will soon be seen with construction of James Bay's $2.5 million Beckley Farm Lodge.

Sod turning ceremony for the 70-bed long-term care home at 522 Simcoe takes place at 2 p.m. Saturday.

"What we have tried to create is a special environment for special people. It may sound a bit corny, but it's true," said Ray Goldsworthy of Marshall, Goldsworthy and Associates, Victoria architects.

"Of course we had to avoid stairs — and we strove to create protected outdoor spaces for the residents to catch the sun at various times of the day," said Goldsworthy. "We incorporated skylights and so forth to bring in as much natural light as possible. It takes a lot more light for older people to see than it does for a younger person. Natural light is also friendlier."

Goldsworthy said his firm also wants the building to be a "good neighbor."

"We tried to incorporate some qualities of character found in the older homes in the James Bay area — bay windows, sloping roofs . . . we didn't want to impose."

He said the lodge, to be built on nearly an acre provided by the provincial government, is not a standard plan.

"It was created specifically for this site and these people,"he said.

Beckley Farm Lodge will provide residential, personal or intermediate care to the elderly at $6.50 per day. Application for residency is made through any local Ministry of Health public health unit.

Services at the lodge will be varied and will include a "wheels-to-meals" function.

"We envision a little bus with a volunteer driver, rounding up loners each day for a proper meal and company," says Muriel Mixon, a member of the James Bay Multi-Level Care Society Board — the 400-member group which initiated the project and shepherded it through countless complex stages.

Operators of the regional Meal On Wheels program will be approached to see if they are willing to extend their services.

The lodge will also be the scene of daily recreational activities for shut-ins and will provide a daycare function for about a dozen seniors.

An undetermined number of beds will be set aside at the lodge as "swing" accommodation — where families caring for an elderly person at home can bring them in from time to time to give the family a personal break.

And by its multi-care definition, the lodge can also keep together married couples who might otherwise be separated due to medical classifications requiring different facilities.

"From our point of view we see the need of a further facility in the James Bay area," said James Bay community medic Dr. Derek Carroll. "If this project takes off and is a success, then another society could be formed.

"Two small community rest homes were initially envisioned for the area. We needed more than 70 beds, but Beckley Farm Lodge will be a sufficient start to see how succesful we can be."

Construction is expected to begin next month with completion scheduled for spring 1981.

Original plans were for a $1.9 million facility but a rapid escalation in costs took place just as tenders were called. Capital costs are being provided by Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation with provincial grants to cover most of annual operating costs.

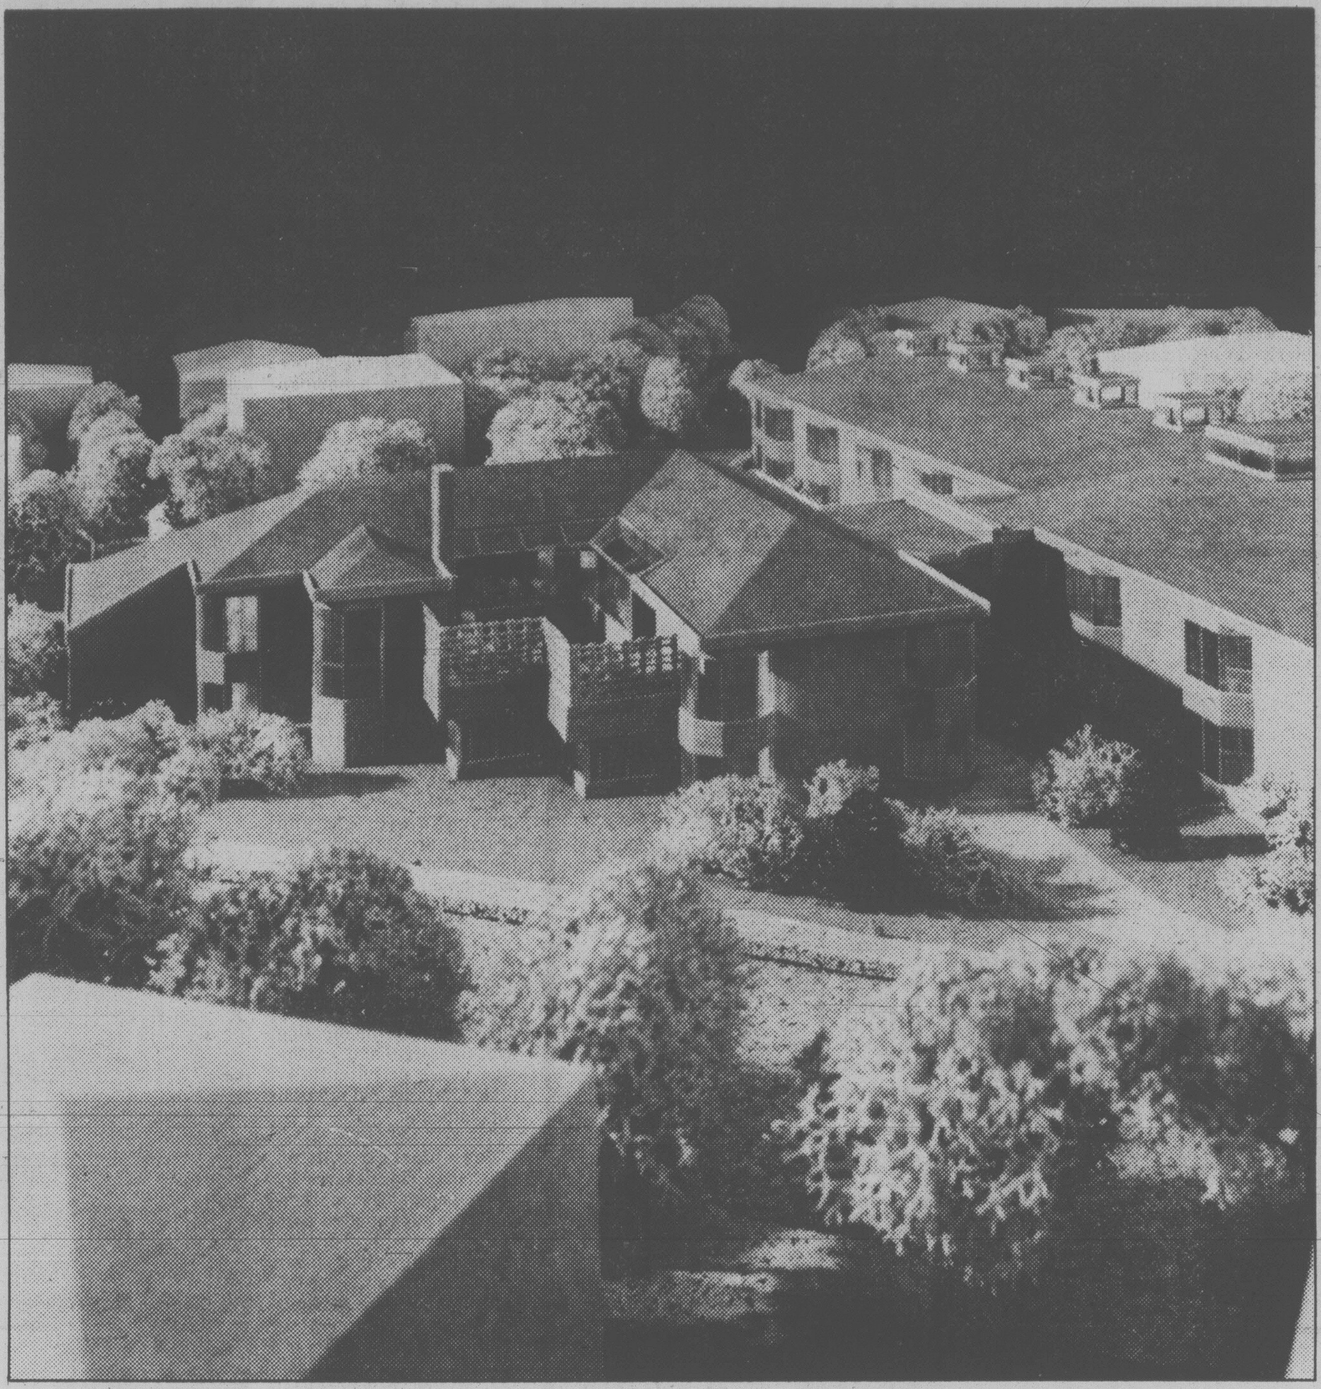
Society president Art Fuller says, however, the society — with continued support from the James Bay Resources Board and the New Horizons centre for the elderly — will have to provide some $20,000 of its own each year to cover costs.

"Membership (in the society) is $2 — or you can make a donation directly by mailing your cheque to the society at 435 Simcoe St., Victoria, V8V 4T4, or you may desire to make a bequest in your will," said Fuller. "It is worth remembering that all donations are tax deductable and will be used to extend the services available in Beckley Farm Lodge."

Fuller said to date the society has "a good start" with donations totalling over $4,000.

Officials attending the sod turning rite will be Isabel Kelly, assistant provincial deputy minister of health; Victoria MLAs Charles Barber and Gordon Hanson; Murray Halkett, Capital Region District director of hospital planning and Victoria mayor Bill Tindall.

The ceremony is to be followed by an informal reception open to the public at the New Horizons building, 234 Menzies St.



Detail of Beckley Farm Lodge design by Marshall, Goldsworthy and Associates of Victoria

Home-like setting Beckley Lodge aim

Beckley Farm Lodge will be a two-storey building with undercover parking and a "home-like" environment to reduce the feeling of an institution.

Provision is being made for approximately 10 wheelchair residents.

All rooms will be single with about six to have connecting doors to allow use as a suite for a couple.

Each room will have its own toilet room with toilet, sink in a vanity, a recessed medicine cabinet, razor out, accessories and grab bar.

All bedrooms will contain a bed, four-drawer dresser with lockable drawer, clothes closet, mirror, bedside table, chair and reading lamp.

All residents may provide their own easy chair, lamp or other miscellaneous items such as pictures and there will be a locked storage cupboard connected to each room.

Bathing rooms will contain standard tubs as well as wheelchair showers, century tub and lift.

There will be casual lounges, libraries, a television room, conversation alcoves, a greenhouse, hobby rooms and a workshop.

A concession area for convenience of residents will be available as well as personal laundry areas, space for barbers and hairdressers, and physio and occupational therapy areas.

There will be an examination and treatment room and a quiet room where residents may meet with their physician, lawyer or their families.

There will be a fenced-in outdoor patio.

A nurses' station will provide a control and commuications centre. This centre will also have a utility and medication preparation room, wth an office for the head nurse and supervising nurse.

Office areas will be provided for general office needs, the administrator, professional workers, housekeeper and interviews. There will be storage and utility areas.

No medical condition warrants shame

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

I don't know where to turn. At the age of 27 I believe that I'm becoming impotent. I live in a small town and I'm embarrassed about talking about the problem with my doctor. I write to you in desperation.

Mr. T.J.

Dear Mr. J.:

It is not unusual for many readers to write about problems that they consider to be shameful or self-stigmatizing.

This, obviously, gives them a means of expressing their problems and, at the same time, hiding behind the veil of anonymity.

Breaking down the barrier of such false and unrealistic attitudes is one of the most important contributions I feel that I can make to my readers. For there is no shame attached to any physical or emotional condition.

Doctors everywhere understand that emotional stresses constantly occur in the lives of their patients, and most physicians never deny their patients the right to express all of their problems, no matter how personal or intimate they may seem to the patient.

Impotence need not carry any personal stigma to you. The fact that you have written to me indicates that you have taken the first important step in the solution of your problem. Your condition is not as uncommon as you think. Many men and women suffering from impotence and frigidity are now learning that in many instances there are remedies for their problems.

This is an age of great freedom and departure from the mid-Victorian concepts of unexpressed feelings. Many of these limitations are now being replaced with a total honesty of expression.

Having stated your problem to me, I hope you will now be able to speak to your own doctor and follow his advice. First, you must have a complete examination in order to be sure that there are no physical defects in the entire urological tract to account for the impotence. If none are found, then it would be imperative that you consult a psychiatrist or psychologist, to seek possible emotional reasons for your condition.

In many instances these doctors can, even in a short time, uncover psychological factors that may be responsible for impotence. You have made your first courageous move. Follow it through with the important visit to your doctor.

A word of warning must be given. Far too many people with problems such as yours have been ensnared by new-fangled cults and pseudo-scientific groups who promise "immediate and permanent" solutions to impotence. Don't be taken in by them.

Proper diet big challenge for seniors nutrition matters

dr. elizabeth bright-see and jane hope

The nutritionally inadequate diets of our elderly are of growing concern.

And, although food energy (calorie) needs decline with age, the diets are all too frequently high in calories and it's this "energy balance" that may be the most pressing nutritional challenge to be faced in later years.

Weight gain after maturity is often caused as much by a lack of exercise as it is by overeating. As we grow older, our Basal Metabolic Rate (the energy required for living) drops some 16 per cent between ages 30 and 70. This, coupled with the fact that the elderly do not exercise as much, means that the total calorie intake should be cut down. This presents a special problem though.

While calories should be reduced, the nutrients definitely should not! Our elders still need all the essential nutrients each day — calcium, phosphorous, iron, vitamins and so on.

According to Dr. Barbara Posner of the Boston University, at a recent General Foods symposium on aging, that while it was exceptionally difficult to give a precise estimate of the number of those over 60 who were malnourished (and that means over as well as under consumption) were hard to estimate, about 50 per cent do not get enough of the essential nutrients each day.

Iron deficiency appears to be a problem with from five to 40 per cent of our aged — and this deficiency accounts for the anemia that often results. About one-third of those over 65 who were not in institutions, suffer from vitamin B12 and folate deficiencies. Too few vitamins and minerals seem to account for other symptoms such as a loss of appetite, tiredness, delayed wound healing, low response to therapy and confusion.

Yet, even though nutrient intake is a problem, 40 per cent of females and 30 per cent of males over 65 are overweight! And obesity is connected to heart disease, hypertension and diabetes.

Osteoporosis, a condition in which bone is lost from the skeleton, is also a frequent problem affecting many older women and some men. The reason for its occurrence is still a cause of debate but there's some agreement among rsearchers that an adequate calcium intake and continued physical activity are important in possible prevention of this problem which affects some 30 per cent of North American women over 35 years of age.

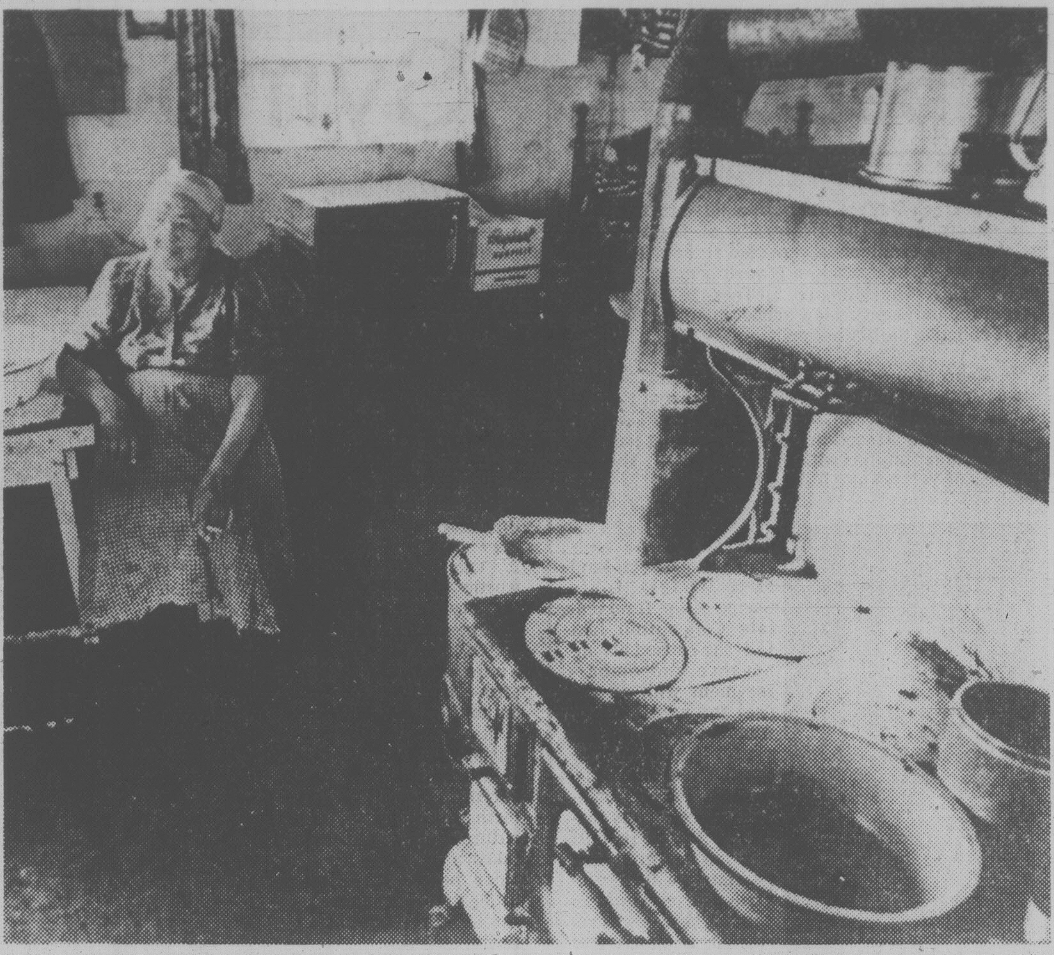
For many reasons, it's often easier for an elder to pop a slice of bread (or three or four) in a toaster, slather it with butter and jam and drink copious quantities of tea loaded with sugar than it is to cook a balanced meal consisting of meat, vegetables, salads, fruit and so on. Low incomes, distance from supermarkets, lack of transportation, improperly fitting teeth, change in taste and smell, cultural preferences, living alone, even a change in eyesight and hearing, are all important factors that will determine whether or not the elders' daily nutrient intake is satisfactory.

But, popping vitamin pills isn't the answer! Dr. Posner stated that many elders are self-medicating with massive and expensive doses of potentially toxic vitamins and mineral supplements.

The elderly are often taken in by claims made by some companies marketing these supplmenets who tempt the elderly with vague promises of a longer life or the retention of the vitality of youth, she stated.

In addition to the physiological and psychological effects of malnutrition, there is another huge concern. Nutritional problems can contribute to increased health care costs by causing hospitalization that may have been prevented and perhaps increasing the length of hospitalization. As the number of people over 65 continues to grow, the number of nutritional problems could also grow. If left untreated, the problems could affect the quality of life of our elders and could increase the already skyrocketing health care costs in Canada.

Next week, we'll give some hints for seniors on cooking for one or two and how to shop wisely for food nutrition in later life.



Loneliness and economics are big factors in seniors' tea and toast syndrome

ART ROGERS, 72, gets nutrition tips from Barbra Floyd, centre, and Dr. Magda Krondl who have studied food habits of nearly 200 Ontario senior citizens. The research team, from the University of Toronto, studied the diets and food perceptions of seniors living alone.

Corinne Older . . . fortnightly flier

Nurse jets to trouble world wide

TORONTO (CP) — Corinne Older leads an ordinary life — most of the time.

At her home in Shalford, Surrey, England, the 43-year-old doctor's wife tends a typical English garden, runs a large, Tudor-style house, watches her 14-year-old daughter compete in local horse shows and attends prize-giving days at her 15-year-old son's school.

But once every two weeks she exchanges her gardening clothes for the traditional English nurse's uniform, boards a specially-outfitted private executive jet and flies off to render her nursing skills in some of the most primitive, as well as idyllic, areas of the world.

Mrs. Older, visiting friends in Toronto recently, works for Europ Assistance, a European insurance company that offers a unique service to its policyholders.

If a serious illness or injury occurs while the policyholder is working or on vacation in a foreign country, the firm will fly that person and the relatives home for medical attention by commercial airline if possible, or private jet if necessary.

A medical team, including Mrs. Older, goes with the more seriously ill patients.

"It's a very smooth, very professional sort of operation," she said.

"When we arrive at the airport, all our medical equipment is packed in cases. We're whisked through all the legal formalities by a special airport representative and we board whatever airplane has been judged as being most suitable for the emergney."

Once airborne, the medical team unpacks the crates, turning the plane into an intensive care unit.

If the patient is at the airport in an ambulance when they arrive, Mrs. Older just helps the doctor move the person to the plane and tries to reassure relatives.

But the the job can be trying.

She recalled the time her telephone rang early one morning and she was on her way to France by breakfast time with a 17-year-old girl who was badly injured in a road accident while vacationing in England.

After landing at Le Mans and completing the mission, Mrs. Older and the doctor were anxious to get home, both looking forward to dinner parties that evening.

But waiting for them on the airport tarmac in England was a critically ill Portuguese man who wanted to end his days in his own country. They transferred the equipment and patient to a different plane and took off for Portugal.

"Neither of us made our respective dinner parties," Mrs. Older said. "In fact, as I was crawling into bed at 4 a.m. my husband mumbled sleepily, 'Where have you been?' 'France and Portugal,' I answered and promptly fell asleep.

"Fortunately, I have a very understanding and supportive husband."

Whole lost tooth can be replanted

MONTREAL (CP) — If you lose, but don't break, a tooth, hold on to it — and not just because of possible recompense from the tooth fairy.

Chances for reimplantation of a whole tooth are good if it is taken quickly to a doctor or dentist, says a Chicago dentist here to attend the annual congress of the Order of Dentists of Quebec.

Dr. Franklin S. Weine said Monday the first thing you should do following loss of a tooth is attempt to replace it in its proper slot.

If the tooth is dirty — after falling on the ground for example — rinse it with tap water and attempt to replace it in the gum; if that's too painful, or impossible, keep it humid by wrapping it in gauze or placing it under the tongue.

A skilled dentist can reimplant the tooth and then bind it to its neighbors for support, Dr. Weine said.

He also said that his advice is especially important for children, who have a better chance than adults for successful tooth reimplantation.

Ford the only totally-new full-size Pickup manufactured in North America

Ford, the sales leader in trucks for the 70's, now leads the way into the 80's with the only re-designed pickups introduced this year.

These all-new pickups are still the "Built Ford Tough" trucks they've always been. But now, after years of research and over a million miles of testing, they feature some of the latest advancements in the pickup category.

Close attention to efficient design, for instance, has improved the aerodynamics. So these pickups slide through air at highway speeds with up to 13% less wind drag than 1979 models. The result: greater fuel efficiency.

Whether on the job, or out on the town you'll enjoy the greater level of comfort and convenience that's characteristic of these new 1980 Ford pickups. Careful placement of controls and instruments keep everything close at hand, while the full-foam seats (standard) make the ride more enjoyable.

And, with new handling features combined with Ford's Twin-I-Beam front suspension, these pickups are a great way to rough it–without getting roughed up.

New corrosion protection features standard with Ford's all-new Pickups.

This year, Ford has added new corrosion protection features to an already extensive use of galvanized and pre-coated steel, zinc-rich primers, vinyl sealer and aluminum wax coatings.

The new Ford pickups now have the added protection of:

Full, tub-type polypropylene front fender liners that can't corrode. (Chevy's front fender liners are metal).

Larger rear splash shields that reduce wheel splash to protect the rear and underside of the pickup box. (Not available on Chevy pickups).

Re-designed galvanized steel rocker panels to provide protection of door panels from flying dirt and gravel.

Both Ford and Chevy use double wall construction in the hood, cab roof, doors, tailgate and pickup box, but...

On top of all-welded construction, Ford pickups boxes have coved corners with inner side walls, inner portion of stake pockets and wheelhousings formed from a single steel stamping, more than Chevy.

Chevy's pickup box, on the other hand, continues to be made up of many more pieces. Both the individual stake pockets and wheelwells have more seams than the Ford pickup box. So, there are more places on a Chevy pickup where moisture can collect and corrosion can begin. Chevy's box is also bolted together from the underside with more than 70 separate bolts.

Ford has the only completely re-designed full-size pickups for the 80's.

Pickups with:

- The best fuel economy ratings of any North American built full-size 6 or 8 cylinder pickup.
- More payload than Chevy per comparable G.V.W.R. (up to 401 pounds more).
- Proven, tough, truck type Twin-I-Beam front suspension.
- An all-welded box with coved corners and fewer joints and seams. Reduces the places where corrosive moisture or dirt can collect.
- Shorter turning diameter–more than 3 feet tighter than Chevy.
- A high level of standard features.
- New corrosion protection measures.
- Improved ride and handling characteristics.

Built Ford Tough

Some items illustrated are extra cost options

Ford Pickups are designed to ride and handle well.

New Steering Geometry: Ford has lowered the steering ratios on the new pickups so there's quicker steering response for less hand-over-hand turns.

Shorter Turning Diameter: To improve maneuverability, these new pickups have a turning diameter that's now three feet less than Chevy.

Rubber-Isolated Front Coil Springs: An additional pad on the front springs cushions contact with the axle and reduces sound, vibration and minor road shocks.

Computer-Selected Front and Rear Springs: By matching the spring rates to load requirements, the F-100 and F-150 4 x 2 models offer a smoother ride under a variety of load conditions.

P-Metric Radial Ply Tires: Now standard on the F-100 and F-150 4 x 2 models, these tires reduce roll resistance to increase fuel efficiency. Other advantages include prolonged tire life and better contact with the road surface when cornering.

Homemade folk cures raise concern of medic

TORONTO (CP) — The recent resurgence of interest in herbal remedies and health foods is causing some concern among medical people that it may lead to an increase in poisonings, a Toronto doctor says.

"Health food stores can put these things on the shelves — such as camomile tea, for example — and as long as they're labelled food, they can be sold,'' said Dr. Karen McIntosh, a resident in family practice at Toronto General Hospital.

"There's no research on how much is too much."

She said people who are allergic to the aster family, (to which camomile belongs), can have an exaggerated allergic reaction to the tea.

Unless you know what you're doing, it's best to avoid homemade remedies, self medication and back-to-the-land recipes.

"We had one woman recently who was quite ill after eating a salad shehad put larkspur (delphinium) in,'' said Dr. McIntosh, adding that the plant affected her heart.

She cited another example of a dangerous wild plant as the pokeberry plant. Its young shoots are edible only after they've been boiled in three changes of water and detached from the extremely poisonous root.

Dr. McIntosh said that with the season's interest in houseplants and gardening, plant poisonings are on the increase.

There are over 100 plants in Canada that can poison the unwary sampler, from wildflowers such as marsh marigolds or lily of the valley to houseplants like philodendrons or poinsettia.

Symptoms of plant poisoning can range from a rash or swollen throat to vomiting, wild and irregular heart beat, coma and even death.

Dr. McIntosh said about 10 per cent of phone calls received by the Poison Control Centre at the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto are from people worried about a plant tasted, chewed or eaten, although in five years no child has been admitted to the hospital for plant poisoning.

"The mistake seems to be adults 'going back to nature',' she said.

The most common poisonous plants tend to be houseplants such as dieffenbachia or philodendron and of the outdoor plants, deadly nightshade. Nightshade is a common vine weed that looks like a tomato plant gone wild, with red berries and purple flowers.

She said it is impossible to get rid of all poisonous plants but suggested that parents who wish to protect their children should do without poisonous houseplants while the children are babies.

They should also teach older children never to taste plants at home, in the garden or in the wilds.

Some common poisonous house and garden plants include hyacinth, narcissus, daffodil, oleander, castor bean, monkshood, bleeding heart, iris, foxglove, rhubarb leaves, azaleas, oak, elderberry, black locust, jack-in-the-pulpit, mayapple, buttercups, and rhododendron.

British doctors 'close' to baring arthritis cause

LONDON (Reuter) — British doctors are "very close" to identifying the cause of and finding a cure for rheumatoid arthritis, a painful and often cripping disease which affects joints, says the Arthritis and Rheumatism Council.

"We are now very close to finding its cause and cure,'' the council said without giving a timetable.

Dr. Gabriel Panaysi, a researcher on the disease at Guy's Hospital here, said there now are clues to the agent, possibly a virus, which causes the disease. He said scientists now can also tell from tissue samples which people are genetically most likely to develop the disease.

Astrological Forecast for Thursday, June 5, 1980
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Expand range of view, look "backstage" for answers. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play key roles. Be flexible, willing to admit past errors. Some persons, who were adversaries, could now become allies. You might have reason to celebrate!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Obtain hint by reading Aries message. Accent on friendship, desire, turn of events which point to profitable return from business investment. Have pertinent material at hand. You might be asked to review and revise.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Popularity increases, especially in "higher echelons." Means career boost is indicated. Sagittarius, Pisces natives play key roles. State views and needs — accept challenge, responsibility. Your performance is being observed, evaluated!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Come to "creative agreement" with family member, loved one who travels or resides at distant place. Open lines of communication. Erase past grudges. You gain thorough diplomacy — know it and act accordingly. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio natives figure prominently.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): What appears on surface is not necessarily valid. Know it, dig deeper, avoid self-deception. Basic research is necessary. One who shares work or "survival instinct" comes into your life. Pisces, Virgo natives figure prominently.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Utilize lessons learned in recent past. Applies especially to legal affairs, publicity, coping with delays — and persons who hold views opposite your own. Listen and observe. Green light upcoming on more responsibility and money. Hold on!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Emphasis on finishing job at hand, reaching beyond current expectations. Aries and another Libra figure prominently. Keep recent promises to yourself concerning health, medical and dental appointments. In matters of speculation, stay with number 9.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Strive for more independence, chance to put your own policies into practice. Accent on changes, affairs of heart, emotional responses, coming to terms with "demands" of children. Leo, Aquarius persons play significant roles.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You gain wider recognition — transaction is completed and basic security is enhanced. Cancer, Leo, Aquarius persons figure in scenario. Follow through on hunch. You are going in right direction, despite caustic comments by "pathetic" people.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): If willing to test theories, ideas, you win. Conversely, if you maintain same position, unwilling to experiment, you invite defeat. Choice is your own. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play prominent roles. Say "Yes" to party invitation, short journey.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Emphasis on details connected with purchases, sales, payments and collections. Scorpio, Leo, Taurus persons figure prominently. If persistent, you recover what had been lost, missing or stolen. Family member has money surprise — of pleasant variety.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You get green light for exciting, creative project. Cycle is high; circumstances favor your efforts. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons play key roles. Wear bright colors, state views in direct, positive manner. Member of opposite sex does care — and you'll know it.

IF JUNE 5th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are charming, analytical, fond of change, travel, variety and are capable of driving members of opposite sex to distraction. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. This month, June, could be your most memorable of 1980, a year which could highlight partnership, marriage, combining forces with individual who became part of your personal scenario in 1979. You are restless, bright, perceptive and are capable of reading character and understanding motives to a degree more proficient than many psychologists. You'll be rid of a burden and will "find" love — in July.

Astrological Forecast for Friday, June 6, 1980
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Doors may appear closed, but they can be opened. Know it and keep the faith! Means restrictions are not permanent. You may be subject of clandestine conference. You'll get peek at operations behind the scenes.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Emphasis on desire, business acumen, significant revisions, travel arrangements, intensified relationship. Gemini, Sagittarius natives figure prominently. Romance is very much a part of scenario. Recent request will be answered — and fulfilled.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): One in position of authority may be temporarily incapacitated. You have grand opportunity to display special capabilities. Accent challenge and responsibility. Deal with family member in diplomatic manner. Domestic adjustment rates high on agenda.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Some persons make claims based on nebulous sources. Know it, protect your interests — insist on separating fact from whimsy. Pisces, Virgo natives figure prominently — and so does the number 7. Define meanings, terms, find out exactly what is expected of you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Accent power, intense dedication — nothing occurs in lukewarm manner. If merely "dabbling," move on. Member of opposite sex could insist on commitment. Money, occult experiences, reaching understanding with partner or mate — these areas are also spotlighted.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Finish assignment which, on previous days, had been ignored or pushed aside. You are due for wider recognition, opportunity for better distribution, display facilities. Be aware of public responses, legal rights, special permissions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Check facts, figures, budget — be sure those who are supposed to perform services actually do the job. Stress independence, creativity, welcome contacts, challenges — and be receptive to romance. Leo, Aquarius natives figure prominently.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Teach, learn, make intelligent concession to family member. Avoid brooding — it gets you nothing. Accent feelings, dealings with children, adventure of speculation. Cancer, Aquarius persons figure prominently — and so does the number 11.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Social life accelerates — don't scatter forces or forget diet, nutrition requirements. Gemini native plays key role. Stick to basic issues, build for security. Older individual wants to be "included" in special activity.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Obtain valuable hint by reading Sagittarius message. Accent on relatives, visits, short trips, calls which provide "missing links." Some pressures are relieved — you get facts concerning get-rich-quick scheme. Get files, correspondence in order.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Money is again "available." Check sources, protect possessions, obtain valid appraisals. Member of opposite sex aids in locating object that had been missing. Gemini, Sagittarius natives play important roles.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Views are vindicated — cycle is such that special honor or major concession is due. Moon in your sign coincides with added enthusiasm, independence. You will be at right place at crucial moment. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons figure prominently.

IF JUNE 6th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you have unusual voice — you are artistic and appreciate music. You should take special care where diet is concerned and overcome tendency to succumb to a "sweet tooth." You are capable of caring for persons who are incapacitated — you are warm, sympathetic and would choose to be without food than without love. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons play important roles in your life. In July, you make new start in new direction. You could meet a very special individual — and fall madly in love! You are versatile, have good sense of humor and are fond of puncturing stuffed shirts.

Bury cables, Hydro told

Saanich Peninsula residents delivered a message in no uncertain terms to B.C. Hydro officials Wednesday at an information meeting on a Hydro proposal to build a power line through the area.

And Hydro got the message — that the power line must go underground — according to Hydro land use and resource supervisor Ross McCarlie.

"The people do not want an overhead line to go up the peninsula," McCarlie told the meeting.

"Government and Hydro should take a look at cost sharing arrangements to put in an underground line."

McCarlie, who headed a variety of Hydro representatives at the meeting, promised the crown corporation will take a closer look at its plan.

Residents complained that the transmission line will alter the landscape and character of the peninsula.

Hydro says it must build the line to meet growing power needs on the peninsula.

About 150 to 200 people responded to a formal questionaire distributed at the meeting.

The route proposed by Hydro starts at the Pike Lake substation in the Highlands, travels through Saanich to a proposed substation site near Keating Road in Central Saanich and then on to the existing Sidney substation off Bazan Bay.

McCarlie said while Hydro doesn't have a legal responsiblity to seek approval for the route it chooses, it would like to reach an agreement with the people involved.

Although area residents at the meeting were overwhelmingly in favor of an underground line, McCarlie said the Capital Regional District last year told Hydro representatives it would not push for an underground route because of the high cost.

Hydro estimates an underground line will cost between five and ten times as much as an overhead route, depending on the amount of rock and other difficulties that might be encountered.

Under provincial legislation, Hydro can be required to build an underground line but local and provincial governments would have to share the additional costs.

Hydro estimates the cost of an overhead route at about $8 million and the cost of an underground route at about $40 million.

Local governments would be required to carry one third of the difference in cost.

Although the start and end points must remain fixed, McCarlie said there is room for changes.

Saanich municipality asked for a slight change in route to take the line from a residential area, as suggested by Hydro, to the other side of the Hartland Road dump.

North Saanich Mayor Eric Sherwood asked if natural gas comes to the Island, why the area will need the additional electrical power.

"If it does, wouldn't an underground line shared by Hydro and natural gas be feasible?"

St. Vincent society to expand

A land swap has enabled the Victoria branch of the St. Vincent de Paul Society to consider expanding its operations.

The society swapped its premises on View Street, which house a sheltered workshop and second-hand store, for the two-acre site previously occupied by Arbutus Crafts at West Saanich Road and Quadra.

The swap was arranged by the Victoria Roman Catholic diocese with Saanich municipality when the society decided its downtown quarters were too small.

Manager Ben Caron said a new building is planned for the site eventually. But first a fund-raising drive must be held to collect about $1 million.

More than 25 persons work at the downtown St. Vincent de Paul building doing such things as removing buttons from clothing to be used for rags, carding wool, repairing appliances and fixing furniture.

May housing starts 30% above '79 figures

There were 188 housing starts in Greater Victoria during May, up 30 per cent from 145 in the same month last year, according to the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

This brings the five-month total to 1,190, double the 551 for the first five months of 1979.

The May starts, with comparable 1979 totals in brackets, were:

Single family homes 152 (111), duplex units 6 (4), row housing 30 (3) and apartment units nil (27).

The five-month totals, with 1979 figures in brackets, are:

Single family homes 570 (412), duplex units 38 (18), row houses 169 (27) and apartment units 413 (94).

Demand continues to be high for all types of units.

There were only 78 new houses on the market at the beginning of June, down from 117 at the same time last year.

Of the new houses, 72 are priced at $70,000 or more. Only six are under that price and none are under $60,000.

At this time last year there were 17 new houses for sale under $50,000, another 13 between $50,000 and $60,000, plus 32 between $60,000 and $70,000 and 55 above $70,000.

There are no recently-completed apartment units for rent anywhere in the Greater Victoria area.

There are only nine new condominium units for sale, two in Esquimalt and seven in Sidney.

CAT scanner for VGH soon?

Victoria General Hospital in a year or two likely will have its own computerized axial tomographic (CAT) scanner.

The B.C. health ministry has approved in principle a request for the new VGH on Helmcken Road to have one of the more expensive pieces of medical equipment around.

Earlier this year Royal Jubilee Hospital installed a CAT scanner at a cost of $1.2 million.

Technicians from the two hospitals disagreed on how the machine should be shared but eventually reached a satisfactory agreement at the last VGH board meeting.

VGH administrator Jim Fair estimates the cost of including a scanner in the new hospital will add between $750,000 to $1 million to the bill.

The machine provides high quality x-rays never before possible with traditional techniques.

The machine is particularly useful for examining soft tissues which in the past could only be examined marginally.

The scanner can be used for a large number of procedures and technicians require considerable training and experience to be proficient in its use.

Wolfe statement 'outrage'

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Government Employees Union president Norm Richards has termed outrageous a statement by Provincial Secretary Evan Wolfe that the BCGEU had shown no interest in pensions.

"Perhaps Mr. Wolfe is misinformed," Richards said in a news release Wednesday.

"But we are still waiting for the meeting we requested on May 18, 1979. We told Mr. Wolfe's predecessor (Grace McCarthy) then and we've told Mr. Wolfe since that we want pensions to be negotiable and that those negotiations must be between his ministry and the BCGEU."

In Victoria, Wolfe said he didn't want to prolong the discussion over whether there has been consultation.

"I only wanted to point out there were meetings held sometime in 1978 in which the superannuation branch put the problem out before a number of employee groups."

Jim Reid, commissioner of superannuations, said the BCGEU was one of several groups to take part in a discussion on indexing in June, 1978.

He would not say whether the union sent the letter May 18, 1979, but noted that the Vancouver Municipal and Regional Employees Union and the B.C. Teachers' Federation took part in further discussions while the BCGEU did not.

Wolfe has defended the proposed de-indexing of teachers' and government employees' pension funds, saying it is designed to make pensioners' future benefits more secure.

He said he was amazed the BCGEU, which in the past has shown no interest in discussing pension matters with ministry officials, should be opposed to the changes.

Richards said: "Wolfe's unilateral action introducing Bill 28 without consultation shows his total disregard for the people whose money he's spending. Nor do we automatically accept the independence of the actuary selected and paid by the government."

Barrett off for talks in Japan

NDP leader Dave Barrett's plans to discuss the province's labor and economic situation with top Japanese businessmen during a two-week trip to the island country this month, NDP sources say.

Barrett, who has refused to acknowledge a trip was planned, is expected to release details at a news conference Friday.

Sources say Barrett was invited to Japan by that country's former ambassador to Canada. His wife and possibly one or two NDP MLAs are expected to go with him.

He is scheduled to leave June 14 and is expected to make at least one major speech to Japanese businessmen.

Barrett will be in Japan at the same time as B.C. coal company executives plan to be there to make an offer to Japanese steel industry officials on a long-sought deal for sale of several million tonnes of coal.

However, the NDP sources say Barrett definitely will not get involved.

Bike kills officer

An off-duty auxiliary policeman died in hospital Wednesday night after being struck by a motorcycle in Port Alberni.

Dennis Leonard Fraser, 41, of Port Alberni was walking with several other off-duty RCMP officers on Vimy Road when the accident occurred.

An RCMP spokesman said the group was trying to flag down the motorcycle, carrying two persons, when Fraser was struck.

The driver, Roderick Anthony Volk, about 19, and passenger Alan Frederick Weber, 19, both of Port Alberni, were thrown off and received multiple bruises and abrasions.

The spokesman said a decision on an inquest depends on whether a charge will be laid.

Shawnigan meet set for Sunday

There will be singing, dancing and rowing at Shawnigan Lake on Sunday.

The B.C. rowing championships have been combind with a free multi-cultural festival of folk songs and dances.

Rowers will compete from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., starting with the women's 1,000-metre pairs. Races of singles, doubles, fours and eights will be run at 20-minute intervals.

A varied program of music and dance will start at 11:30 a.m. on the outdoor stage at the Shawnigan Lake Inn.

Inside the inn, there will be weaving, pottery and art displays by various local craftsmen.

Feast turns deadly

PORT ELIZABETH, South Africa (UPI) — At least nine people died and three more became critically ill after eating a poisonous mushroom, hospital authorities said.

The victims were members of a group on an outing in the Knysna forest.

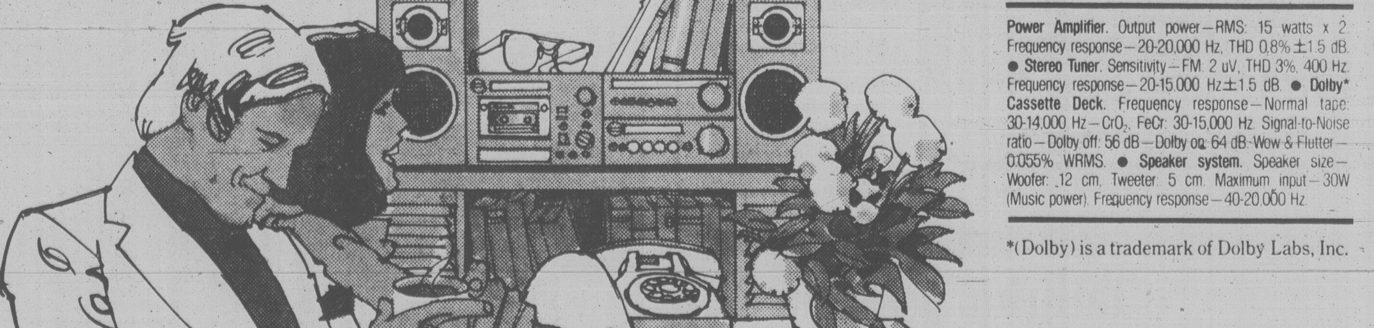
Now Hi-Fi to Go!

It's AC/DC-
New M-1 Mini Modular Hi-fi

Now the big, beautiful sound of Hitachi goes wherever you go! Our new M-1 Mini Modular System is the last word in portability. It's even AC/DC—so you can plug it into a battery power source like your car or boat!

Of course, M-1 is a perfect stay-at-home system too. Because it delivers the full, rich high fidelity sound you'd expect from an excellent full size system. But the beauty of M-1 is that it doesn't have to stay at home. The components—FM/AM Stereo Tuner, Power Amplifier, Dolby* Cassette Deck and Matched Speakers—weigh only 12.8 Kg. And fit neatly into an optional carrying case. So you can take roomfuls of sound wherever you go—in your car, van, camper, to parties, the office, the cottage.

Wherever you go, you'll enjoy true high fidelity sound reproduction. But then, that's to be expected. People expect big things from Hitachi. Even when they're small.



Power Amplifier. Output power—RMS: 15 watts x 2. Frequency response—20-20,000 Hz, THD 0.8% ±1.5 dB. ● Stereo Tuner. Sensitivity—FM: 2 uV, THD 3%, 400 Hz. Mini movies mushrooming

TORONTO (CP) — Audiences will soon have a chance to see small-budget Canadian movies and other films not aimed at the mass-market in 16 centres across the country, Cineplex Corp. has annouced.

Each centre will house between four and 21 small theatres under one roof.

The buildings will be based on the year-old Cineplex in the Toronto's Eaton Centre, which has 18 theatres with an average seating of 60.

The theatres will eventually operate from St. John's, Nfld., to Vancouver, said Garth Drabinsky, Cineplex Corp.'s principal shareholder along with Nat Taylor, a founder of Famous Players Theatres.

The first of the new buildings planned for Ontario will open June 27 in Kitchener, followed by operations this fall in Ottawa, Burlington, Richmond Hill, Mississauga, and Peterborough. Two additional buildings are planned for Metropolitan Toronto and the original Cineplex will be expanded to 21 theatres.

Centres will also open this fall in Edmonton and Vancouver and in Calgary next spring. Negotiations are still under way for sites in Halifax, St. John's, Montreal and Winnipeg, said Drabinsky.

Drabinsky, producer of The Silent Partner, The Changeling and the recently-completed Tribute starring Jack Lemmon, said the Cineplex operation will provide outlets for movies that might not normally be shown nationally because of distribution and advertising costs.

As an example, Drabinsky said that although the National Film Board movie Rubber Gun was one of the Toronto Cineplex's most popular films last year, it was difficult to get it shown in other centres across the country.

"Now when we have something like that, we can get distribution rights across Canada," said Drabinsky, who said he thinks there is also a market for Quebec films in English Canada.

The Cineplex company, which will operate all of the theatre screens in the centres from a central control booth, will also show foreign, art and childrens' movies, along with film retrospectives.

Fall lineup announced by CBC

TORONTO (CP) — The CBC has added seven new Canadian prime-time television series to its fall lineup.

Three new American series and seven new Canadian-produced specials will also be featured on the schedule.

New Canadian series are The Canadian Establishment, The Ten Thousand Day War, Home Fires, Ritter's Cove, The Phoenix Team, Second City TV and Up At Ours.

New American series ordered are Breaking Away, Ladies' Man and Too Close For Comfort.

Among current CBC series which have been renewed are Flappers, Superspecials, Spectrum, The Nature of Things With David Suzuki, The Fifth Estate, Marketplace, Quarterly Report, Newsmagazine, The Watson Report, Man Alive, The Beachcombers, The Great Detective and For The Record.

Sportsweekend and Hockey Night In Canada will also return, along with coverage of Canadian Football League games and the Grey Cup.

In January, the schedule will be altered to accommodate the move of The National news to 10 p.m. from its current 11 p.m. time slot.

Wandering Paul Lynde goes back to square one

scott's world

by vernon scott

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Paul Lynde will return to the sagging Hollywood Squares game show next season a sadder but wiser comedian.

Both the comedian and the show suffered by his departure.

Hollywood Squares, one of the longest running panel-game shows in television, owed much of its success to the interplay between Lynde and master of ceremonies Peter Marshall.

Host Marshall would ask an innocuous but loaded question of Lynde who would, more often than not, fire back an hilarious double-entendre reply that had the audience weak with laughter.

In the old days Lynde, spotlighted in the centre panel of the tic-tac-toe game, was abetted by such other fun-inspiring regulars as Cliff (Charlie Weaver) Arquette, Wally Cox and Rose Marie.

Last season only George Gobel was a regular and found it difficult to carry the laugh burden alone. Jonathan Winters and Vincent Price made frequent appearances but the show wasn't the same without Lynde's sparkling wit.

The panel was generally filled out with lackluster daytime soap opera stars whom most nighttime viewers never heard of, borderline celebrity comics, out-of-work TV actors, Big Bird and ventriloquists.

It just wasn't the same after Lynde, the outrageously naughty panelist, decamped last year to seek movie and other TV work.

But it was as if he'd stepped into an open manhole.

After a dozen years as the mainstay of Hollywood Squares, Lynde was so closely identified with the show that he wasn't thought of by producers in any other context.

"I quit the show because I was really getting tired," said Lynde. "I wanted to leave a year before I actually did. I was doing some other things for television but I couldn't get arrested in movies.

"It's the old movie snobbery. There are many fine actors in TV who overcome the bad material they're given. But they aren't appreciated. I wish some of the spoiled movie stars would do TV. They'd find out what real work is.

"Anyway, I left the show on my last tape date, June 12 of last year. I went on the road for the summer with a play and came back to Hollywood ready to get back to work in movies or TV movies.

"Well, I haven't worked one day since last August — yet I'm living at the same level I always did. I told my business managers something had to be done. They told me not to worry. But I worried.

"I didn't want to be idle because it's dangerous for a performer. So I agreed to come back to Hollywood Squares.

According to Lynde, while his salary is not as dazzling as Johnny Carson's, it's not all that much inferior either. It is known that Lynde is paid many times more than any other game show participant.

As an additional inducement, the show's producers have given Lynde a movie development deal for which he will be paid whether or not he makes a film.

During the coming season Lynde will be paid considerably more for doing less work. He said the daytime version of Hollywood Squares has been cancelled. (Because of his departure?) But the nighttime show has been extended from once a week to five-times weekly.

"I didn't know when I signed the new contract that the show would be produced in Las Vegas this year," Lynde said, flashing his sour-on-life grin.

"That means I had to fly to Vegas 39 times during the next year. Oh God! I'm really not that crazy about the place. We'll tape all five shows in a single day, using separate audiences.

"So far as I know, George Gobel will be the only other regular. He's a very funny man. I'll be happy to be busy working again, even in Vegas."

Lynde said he is reproached by strangers of all ages, especially women, for having left Hollywood Squares in the first place.

He's most frequently asked if his off-the-cuff answers on the show are rehearsed or given him in advance.

"Sometimes I'm given some answers before the show," Lynde admitted, "but I never use them. I mean they really aren't that funny. I try them out on the crew once in a while and they turn thumbs down.

"The show isn't as easy as it looks. I have to keep my wits about me at all times. I never know what the question will be so I have to be prepared for a very, very fast reply.

"The moment the question is asked, I know how they want me to go with it. In truth, I always try to give the right answer after saying something funny. It's a matter of pride. I'm not a good bluffer.

"The show used to be more informative as well as funny and entertaining than it is now. The questions aren't as interesting as they used to be. But maybe we can bring Hollywood Squares back to where it used to be."

Ferry Corp moves to block employee protests

The B.C. Ferry Corp. is attempting to head off planned disruptions of ferry service by employees participating in pension protest rallies.

The corporation went before the Labor Relations Board today seeking a cease-and-desist order in advance of the disruptions planned for Friday, next Tuesday and a week Monday.

The Friday disruption involves ferry workers on the Horseshoe Bay-Departure Bay run who will hold one-hour study sessions as part of a protest by other public sector employees in the Nanaimo area.

A study session will be held when the first watch comes on at 6:30 a.m. and another at 2:30 p.m. when the afternoon shift begins.

No runs will be cancelled but there will be one-hour delays in the morning sailings and the late-afternoon and evening schedule will be off by about two hours.

Protests involving crews at other terminals, including Tsawwassen and Swartz Bay will also be held next Tuesday and on June 16 respectively.

However, detailed information on what disruptions there will be to ferry service on those days is not known.

The B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers Union says the members of each terminal will decide how long each protest will last.

Last week, union president Shirley Mathieson was quoted as saying there would be four-hour disruptions at each terminal but she said Wednesday that was never the union's policy.

Ferry workers in Nanaimo were under the impression they would be off work for four hours and at a meeting Tuesday asked that no sailings be cancelled.

Union spokesman Robin Holmgren said the union agreed to maintain ferry service with slight delays.

On Friday, the ferry workers at Departure Bay will hand out leaflets explaining their objections to legislation which would limit the indexing of their pensions.

The protest is one of 17 scheduled for various parts of the province.

They began May 30 and are being held today in Vernon, Penticton and Kelowna.

A rally is planned for Victoria June 16.

The B.C. Government Employees Union says there were 1,200 public sector employees off the job in Kamloops on Wednesday, 350 at Williams Lake, and another 250 at Quesnel.

The BCGEU and other public sector unions oppose the government's plan to restrict indexing because they say it will seriously reduce the cost-of-living increases for retired members and cut the take home pay of those still working.

FOSTER FAMILY NEEDED

Good-looking, courteous "George" needs a long-term foster family in the Langford/Colwood area. Though 14 yers old, "George" looks and acts about 10. Because his development has been slow he attends a special class at the local school. A series of tragic circumstances have left him with much un-resolved grief. Wondering if anyone really loves and wants him, he is often over-anxious and eager to please. George needs a loving, caring foster family who will make a long-term commitment to him, where the Mom has lots of time to give him the love and structure he needs, where the Dad and kids will include him in family activities. If you think you can help, please call Resources and Placement Section, 598-5121, Ministry of Human Resources, Capital Region, or come to the "Course on Fostering," Wed., June 4, 7:30 p.m., 1627 Fort St.

741 (VIC) COMM SQN

Students! Are you interested in doing something challenging and exciting this summer? At 741 (VIC) COMM SQN we are offering an 8 week summer youth employment programme which provides training in radio operations, small arms, fieldcraft, map using, first aid and more. The programme runs June 28th to the 22nd of August 1980. In addition this summer employment may lead to part-time winter employment which would provide further training in other aspects of communications. Must be a student between 17 and 34 with a Canadian Citizenship and physically fit. 383-3133 Monday to Saturday 8 a.m.-4 p.m. and Thursday 7 p.m.-10 p.m.

FOSTER FAMILY NEEDED

Blue-eyed, brown-haired, 16-year-old "Billy" needs a young, active foster family who is willing to spend time with him. THE ZIEGLERS

South Oak Bay McClure

The cottage you probably have driven past and wished you owned is now on the market. A delightful 3 bdrm home designed by the famous Samuel McClure, overlooking the park just minutes from the waterfront. Perfect in every detail with two fireplaces—one in the master. It features a formal LR, large bright kitchen, open DR, beams, wooden sash windows, a great lot and more charm and character than you can appreciate without living there every day of the rest of your life. $130,000. Exclusive with the Zieglers.

South Oak Bay Beach Drive

Sitting on two 50x100 ft. lots, overlooking Shoal Bay and the Olympics is this super 1300 sq. ft. 2 BR home prime for development. The home itself is in great shape being completely updated in 1979, but the exciting feature is the potential in the lot. $225,000. Exclusive with the Zieglers.

South Oak Bay Ocean Front

Overlooking Shoal Bay in one of Oak Bay's most delightful areas sits this beautiful 3 or 4 bedroom, 2 bathroom character home in immaculate shape — wooden sash windows, hardwood floors are all standard, as is the view. $198,000.

Water View Arbutus Area

Once in a lifetime opportunity to purchase a contemporary home built with particular attention to detail. A West Coast contemporary design, built for the current owner in 1977. It features a huge loft master bedroom with 5-pce. ensuite accessible from the large LR with FP by a circular staircase, formal DR, excellent kitchen with eating area, den with Franklin FP, sewing room and 4-pce. bath. All with thermo picture windows overlooking the ocean. Downstairs find a large family rm. with FP, 4-pce. bath, 3 BRs, workshop and laundry rm. All in all over 3,000 sq. ft. $285,000.

Sleep on dear good mother, it has been long years

Since you left our hearts filled with sadness and tears

Yours was a heart that was blithesome
and gay

Scattering sunshine all along the way

You know how we love you and, yes,
love you yet

Though God took you from us,
we cannot forget.

309 IN MEMORIAM

AUBRY - In loving memory of my dear husband John Lawrence Aubry who passed away on June 5, 1973.
Sunshine passes, shadows fall,
Love's remembrance outlasts all.
And though the years be many or few,
They are filled with remembrance, dear, of you.
Grace Aubry and Family.

SMITH — In loving memory of Kenneth David, passed away June 5, 1978.
Nothing can ever take away,
The love a heart hold dear.
Fond memories linger every day,
Remembrance keeps him near.
Ivy, Gail, Margaret.

Milan blast in parked van

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Terrorists set off a bomb containing about 22 pounds of explosives in a van parked outside Milan's police headquarters, authorities said.

No one was hurt in the blast, "only because no one was close to the scene at the moment of the explosion," a policeman said.

Easy seeding of perennials

Named varieties of flowering perennials have to be increased by division of the present plants, or by rooting cuttings, to obtain a stock similar in all characteristics, but there are some perennials which can be grown quite successfully from seed. These provide a stock for those wishing to add perennials to their gardens without a great outlay of cash.

The beginner will usually save all plants that result from a sowing; they are reluctant to discard. Experience makes us more critical and we quickly select those which appeal to our taste and dump the others on the compost heap.

This selecting is done after the plants have displayed their flowers in a prepared "nursery bed" where they are grown before being placed into the permanent beds and borders. The selected plants are then increased by division or cuttings after reaching a suitable size.

Under normal conditions the seed is sown thinly in shallow boxes in rows two inches apart during the first week of June. The soil mixture is screened compost and sand, slightly heavier than used for the early indoor sowings.

Each kind of perennial is sown in a separate box because of different germination periods. The boxes are covered with a sheet of glass to prevent excessive drying-out during germination, then placed in any shady sheltered place outdoors.

After the seed has germinated, the glass is removed, but kept handy for covering on cool nights. With careful watering, the seedlings grow while the gardener is attending to other jobs and visiting the summer flower shows.

Whether we shall be able to put the boxes outside this year for germination will depend on weather conditions in early June.

At present it appears likely we shall have to germinate the seeds in a cool place indoors, or delay the sowing for a week to 10-days in the hope of higher temperatures.

Three perennials worth growing from seed and well within the scope of beginners are Coreopsis, Geum, and Gaillardia. All are summer flowering, producing quantities of bloom year after year for garden decoration and for cut flowers.

Coreopsis is a large daisy-like flower now offered in three varieties. Coreopsis lanceolata var. Baby Gold has large single golden blooms on knee-high plants. Variety Brown Eyes has bright yellow flowers with deep brown-red centre zone. Mayfield Giant Grandiflora is a large flowered single with a dark centre.

There are two varieties of Geum which have long been garden favorites, Lady Stratheden with double golden-yellow blooms on 45 cm. stems, and Mrs. Bradshaw with double flowers of billiant scarlet. Now available is Mrs. Bradshaw Improved from a selected plant which appeared in a seedgrowr's planting, with flowers almost twice the size of the older strain.

It was never possible to grow enough plants of these geums (pronounced gee-um) to fill the demand, yet they seem unknown to many of today's gardeners.

Gaillardia is another daisy-type flower of which Indian Chief has deep mahogany-red centres; Double Lorenziana a selection of crimson and yellow; Grandiflora Porola Hybrid a copper-scarlet tipped yellow.

A newer introduction is Stokes Royal Monarch Blend selected from eight European named gaillardias with a color range covering yellow, orange and scarlet, and bicolors of yellow and red, orange and scarlet, and yellow and maroon.

If your summer garden is lacking bright accents you will find the answer in these easily grown perennials.

Iron Lady wins gets her billion back

Times News Services

BONN — The West German government announced today it has approved a compromise formula that would increase its payments to the European Common Market budget by $1.4 billion during two years and allow a sharp reduction in Britain's payments.

The announcement confirmed unofficial reports that the West German cabinet decided to approve the package following a marathon 10-hour debate Wednesday.

The terms of the compromise were worked out in Brussels by European Economic Community (EEC) foreign ministers last Friday. West Germany's payments will finance about 40 per cent of the revenue lost by Britain's reduction, officials said.

West German approval of the plan was crucial because objections from Bonn would have forced the EEC to renegotiate the issue. In announcing its approval, the government said the budget dispute threatened "a general crippling" of the community.

The resolution of the EEC budgetary crisis is a big feather in the hat of British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, who has been dubbed the Iron Lady — and less respectfully Attilla the Hen — on account of her hard-line policies.

The new package substantially reduces Britain's annual $2.6 billion share of the EEC budget. Since last November, when an adamant Thatcher hectored her colleagues at the Dublin EEC summit with the demand, "We want our billion back", the prime minister has waged a tough campaign against her eight EEC counterparts maintaining she would not accept "half a loaf."

In fact, the new EEC deal gives her about two-thirds of what she wanted, while conceding other monetary measures which could cost British consumers up to $800 million more this year for EEC food products.

Britain's rebate from the EEC will be $1.85 billion this year and will amount to $5.3 billion over the next three years, most of which will be made up by increasing Germany's contributions to the EEC budget.

The new deal, which was hammered out last week during a marathon all-night meeting of the EEC's nine foreign ministers in Brussels, concludes what Deputy Foreign Secretary Sir Ian Gilmour called a "festering grievance" when he announced the plan this week in the House of Commons.

Although it was greeted wildly by Conservative backbenchers, the plan was called "wet and a sellout" by Labor spokesman Peter Shore, who took particular offence at Britain's decision to go along with a five per cent increase in EEC farm prices.

This increase, which will go to subsidize Europe's farmers, will, it is argued, merely raise food prices and create super surpluses adding to the "mountains" of beef and butter that are already exceeding European demand. At past meetings Britain has vetoed the five per cent increase, a move which has earned Thatcher the monicker of Madame Non in France, where farmers have taken to burning her in effigy during their frequent protests.

The deal is unlikely to win her any friends among British consumers, 71 per cent of whom in a recent poll said they would prefer to be out of the Common Market.

Since 1973, when Britain entered the Common Market, Britain has put in more money to the EEC than it has taken out in the form of increasing industrial exports or stimulating manufacturing.

In pre-Common Market days, Britain was seduced by the prospect of a home market of 250 million people, but in the intervening decade, Britain's imports from the EEC and exports to it have never balanced.

Volcano toll rises to 24

Times News Services

VANCOUVER, Wash. — Mount St. Helens sent aloft plumes of steam and ash Wednesday but earthquakes beneath the volcano, which had been worrying scientists, weakened.

"There's been ... nothing over a 3.0 on the Richter scale and only one or two below that in the last 24 hours," a seismologist in Seattle said.

Meanwhile, it was announced President Carter would ask Congress to appropriate an initial $860 million in relief funds for the volcanic disaster.

A military helicopter searching at the request of unidentified relatives Wednesday found the body of another victim five kilometres west of the peak.

The Cowlitz County Sheriff's office said the body of the unidentified male was found near the headwaters of the south fork of the Toutle River.

Although the official 12-day air search of the devastated blast area around the mountain was called off a week ago after 21 bodies were recovered, sheriff's deputies said they had been furnished with information about the exact location of one of the missing persons. That person was not identified and it was not immediately known if the recovered body and the missing person were the same.

Discovery of the body raised to 24 the death toll from the May 18 eruption, with 51 still officially listed as missing.

Fireworks blast kills 4 in Wyoming

LARAMIE, Wyo. (UPI) — A fireworks stand exploded into flames Wednesday, killing at least four people who were loading firecrackers, sparklers and roman candles into trailers for pre-Fourth of July retail distribution, authorities said.

"It was an extremely hot fire," said Laramie Fire Chief Don Young. "It vented itself real quick through the aluminum trailers and got some air. There was just more fire than we had water."

He said those killed were loading fireworks into the trailers for distribution to other retail outlets when the explosion occurred. The cause of the explosion and fire had not been determined.

The Albany County sheriff's office identified the victims as one adult and three juveniles. Their names were withheld pending notification of relatives.

Eyewitness Ron Franck, a photographer for the Laramie Daily Boomerang, said the entire inventory of fireworks went up in the inferno.

Got nine months? Come and get born.

You've lived for 17 to 21 years and you're wondering when life's really going to begin? Katimavik may be for you. Katimavik is an action-learning challenge for young Canadians, funded by the Federal Government. Being a Katimavik volunteer is a grow-up-fast deal. You travel and live in three different parts of Canada (one of them French-speaking) over a 9-month period. You discover your country.

You serve on community projects, doing hard physical work aimed at protecting the environment. You do social work with people. You live with a group of young Canadians from all parts of the country and learn friendship and French. You may choose to spend 3 of your 9 months learning military skills. You're responsible to your group for a fair share of the cooking and the cleaning.

You grow like crazy. And you love every minute of it. No pay. Just $1 a day plus living and travel. And $1,000 on completion of the program. If you're aged 17 to 21, single, and if you're looking for more meaning in your life, come live. With us. Coupon us immediately for full details and an application form for this year's program.

China boss cutting his workload

PEKING (AP) — Deng Xiaoping, the 76-year-old mainspring of China's latest great leap forward, said today he plans to resign as senior vice-premier sometime in August, but will retain three other posts, including the all-important job of deputy Communist party boss, until 1985.

"I want to live a little longer," said the spritely Deng adding he fears that by 1985 his mind will not be as active as it is today.

Deng first disclosed plans to quit as vice-premier in an exclusive interview with The Associated Press in April. He added the August target date at a rare news conference today with the National Conference of Editorial Writers, open to U.S. correspondents.

Deng, the mastermind of an ambitious national drive to push China into the top rank of industrialized countries by the year 2000, is widely regarded as China's most powerful politician, despite the fact that he is officially ranked second to Hua Guofeng, the premier and Communist party chairman.

Freedom Flotilla not yet dried up

Times News Services

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — A new convoy of refugee-laden boats, arriving on the heels of a record influx a day earlier, delivered more Cubans to Key West on Wednesday as U.S. officials wondered how many more will come on the Freedom Flotilla.

Authorities said it was impossible to predict with any certainty if the boatlift is almost over. The captain of the pleasure craft Hard Rocks radioed the U.S. Coast Guard from the Cuban port of Mariel that only 50 boats remained in the harbor, but coast guard officials questioned the validity of such reports.

President Carter said today the Panamanian-registered freighter that landed at Key West, Fla., Tuesday with 731 Cuban refugees did so in violation of his orders and that those responsible will be vigorously prosecuted.

More than 500 Cubans were released from the relocation centre Wednesday, the base's first significant number of refugees to be released.

Meanwhile, the United States is prepared to deport 150 Cubans involved in Sunday's rioting at Ft. Chaffee, Ark., according to the acting Commissioner David Crosland of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

And a U.S. state department spokesman said the Panamanian government has pledged to co-operate with the U.S. in discouraging foreign-registered boats from bringing refugees to Florida.

Refugee Ana Romeu, 21, said her cousin, Elda Fequeira, was one of 37 Cuban-Americans from Tampa who chartered the Rio Indio, which arrived at Mariel on Sunday.

"I saw them leave this morning," she said. "They were not allowed to load passengers. The Communists say they have an agreement with the Panama government not to load Panama's ships."

Several other refugees also said they saw the Rio Indio depart, but U.S. officials had no verification.

Chasm could swallow up oil tanks

KERMIT, Tex. (AP) — Oilmen scurried to drain storage tanks and reroute pipes as a growing sinkhole 250 metres long swallowed huge chunks of desert near this southwest Texas town.

Workers from Petro Lewis Co. spent Wednesday trying to plug an oil well and divert pipes while slabs of earth fell into the yawning chasm just several hundred metres away.

"This just makes us sick," said a foreman for the Denver-based oil company. "But we can't risk losing the whole thing to shifting ground. This well produced 50 barrels a day and we've spent $20,000 (in one day) to try and save it."

Oil pipelines from a nearby Shell tank farm were shut down Wednesday when the ground around them collapsed and two pipelines which feed tanks were broken.

French faction marches

Times News Services

PORT VILA, New Hebrides — More than 2,000 demonstrators supporting separatists who have declared the South Pacific island of Espiritu Santo independent marched through the capital of Port Vila Wednesday in a show of solidarity with the rebels.

British and French authorities, whose governments have jointly administered the New Hebrides archipelago of which Espiritu Santo is the largest island, warned the march leaders they would respond with force if the demonstration became violent, but no incidents were reported.

March organizer Maxime Carlot told the mostly French-speaking crowd that the French minority was being swamped by English-speaking New Hebrideans, particularly the recently elected provisional government dominated by the English Vanuaaku Party.

Father Walter Lini, chief minister of the New Hebrides who is scheduled to become prime minister of the new nation of Vanuaaku on July 30, criticized France and Britain for not sending troops to quell the rebellion. He warned that if the crisis were not resolved soon the unrest would spread to other islands.

Meanwhile, Lini urged the rebels to surrender their arms and negotiate, government officials reported Wednesday.

Lini made the appeal in a broadcast repeated several times in Bislama, the local dialect, French and English to ensure that it is understood by all, the officials said.

White-bearded Jimmie Stevens, a copra plantation owner, has set up a provisional seven-man government and declared independence for Espiritu Santo, some 1,600 kilometres northeast of Australia.

In his appeal Lini said before talks could take place Stevens must free District Commissioner Job Delessa and 12 policemen held since the uprising.

Seventy-four years of British-French rule was to end July 30, but the plantation owners, backed by spear-carrying natives, feared their land would be sold in a land distribution plan after independence and decided to separate from the group.

Some 2,000 people have been evacuated from Espiritu Santo in the wake of the uprising.

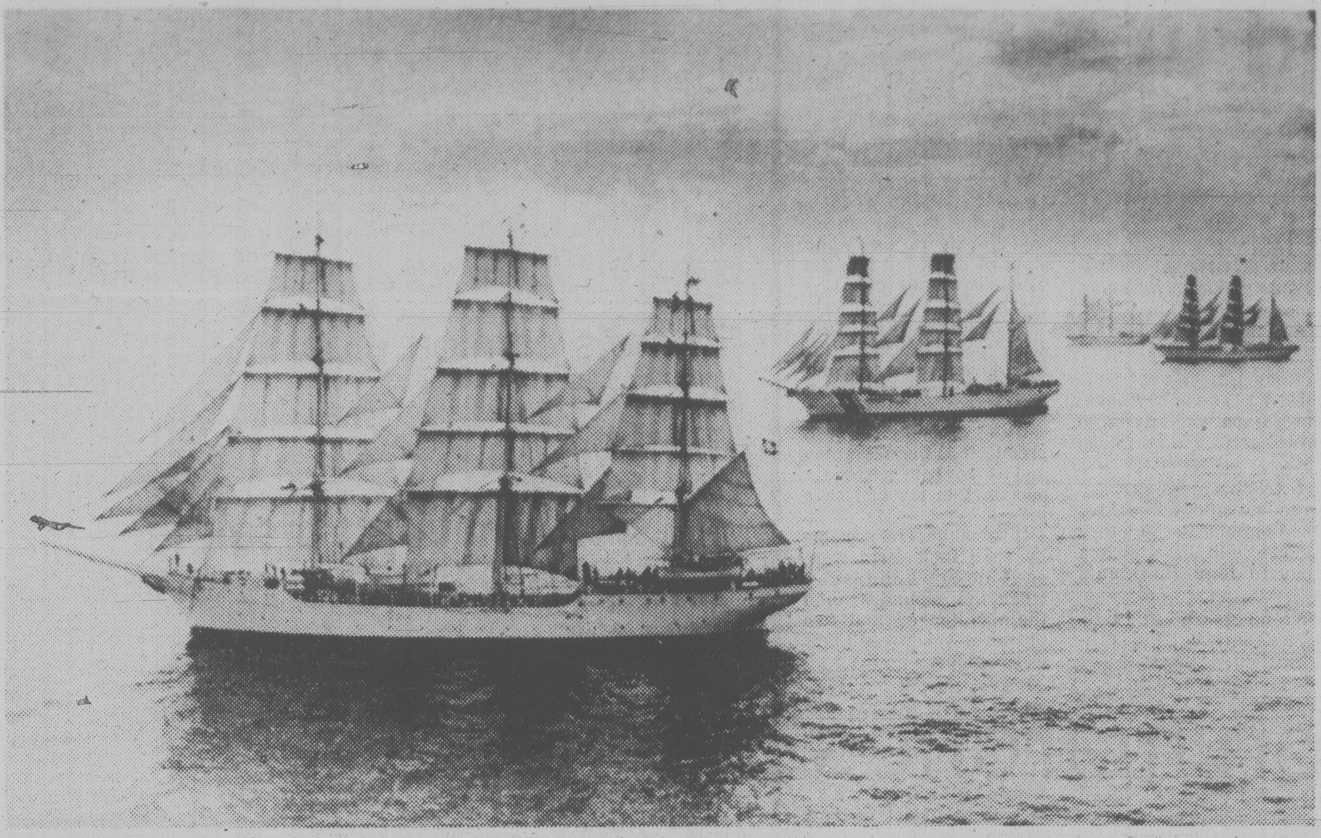
Attacks mark 13th anniversary of Six Day War



CELEBRATING BOSTON'S 350th ANNIVERSARY, the Norwegian square-rigged 75-metre Christian Radich, foreground, takes position at start of tall-ship race from Boston to Kristiansand, Norway — a distance of 3,096 nautical miles.

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli troops attacked Palestinian guerrilla positions in southern Lebanon today, the 13th anniversary of the start of the 1967 Middle East war. Throughout Israel, troops were on full alert.

The military command announced that an Israeli force struck the port of Sidon during the early morning hours and killed a number of guerrillas. An army spokesman declined to comment on a report from Beirut that Israeli missile boats fired rockets at a beachside coffee house near Sidon, killing one Lebanese civilian and wounding three.

The Israeli attack was aimed at deterring guerrilla attacks on Israel and preventing the guerrillas from organizing such actions, the spokesman said.

It was during the 1967 Six Day War that Israel captured the West Bank of the Jordan River from Jordan, the Gaza Strip and Sinai Peninsula from Egypt and the Golan Heights from Syria.

The Atlanta, Ga. Constitution said Prime Minister Menachem Begin, in an interview in Israel with three American journalists, disclosed that his government tried to negotiate a peace settlement with Jordan's King Hussein over the disputed West Bank territories. The report said no accord had been reached.

In Beirut, the military commander of Al Fatah, the largest guerrilla army in Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization, said his forces will avenge the terrorist attacks Monday that maimed the Arab mayors of Ramallah and Nablus, injured seven Arabs in Hebron and blinded an Israeli bomb expert in El Bireh.

"These revolutionary operations will take place within the next few days or weeks," Khalil Al Wazir was quoted as telling the leftist newspaper As Safir. He blamed the Israeli government for the attacks.

Israel Radio said, meanwhile, that the government investigation of the bombing now is centred in the West Bank city of Hebron and at the nearby ultra-nationalist Jewish settlement of Kiryat Arba. There has been speculation the bombers were out to avenge a May 2 guerrilla ambush in Hebron in which six Israeli settlers were killed and 16 injured.

Arab merchants tried to stage a general strike to protest the bombings, but Israeli soldiers cracked down hard on would-be strikers, cutting locks and hoisting shutters to force them to open.

One Israeli extremist leader, Yossi Dayan, No. 2 man in Rabbi Meir Kahane's right-wing Kach movement, said he was detained Wednesday by men who identified themselves as Israeli police officers. A police spokesman denied the arrest.

Kahane, who founded the Jewish Defence League in the United States before emigrating to Israel, was jailed by the Israelis on May 14, allegedly for plotting a terror campaign against West Bank Arabs. Some foreign press reports said he was planning to blow up Jerusalem's Al Aqsa Mosque, Islam's third holiest shrine.

Prime Minister Menachem Begin ordered army bodyguards for all West Bank mayors and repeated his pledge to bring the bombers to justice.

Iran cuts student $$ to Canada

Times News Services

Iran is cutting off funds of its students studying overseas, including those in Canada, for political or economic reasons, say British government and student sources.

The Tehran government is refusing to pay the schooling costs of thousands of Iranian students in Britain "for economic reasons." The students face expulsion starting this month unless they can come up with the money on their own, the sources said.

Commission

Informants here also said Iran's education ministry has decided that no undergraduates will be sent to study in at least a dozen countries next term because the countries are at odds with the Iranian government. These countries include Canada, the United States, Portugal, the Phillippines, Egypt, South Africa and Iraq.

To enforce the new rules, the Islamic revolutionary government in Tehran plans to forbid students to take money out of Iran unless their course of study has been approved in advance by the education ministry, the sources said.

An estimated 100,000 Iranian students are studying around the world, about 60,000 of them in the U.S., says the Islamic Council of Europe.

Meanwhile — as hundreds of thousands of people marched through Tehran streets today to commemorate the 17th anniversary of the bloody 1963 uprising against the deposed shah — former U.S. Attorney-General Ramsey Clark indicated Wednesday night he will establish and head a commission in the U.S. to investigate Iran's case against Washington as a first step leading to the release of the 53 American hostages.

The formation of the commission was suggested Wednesday by Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr. Clark, one of the earliest American supporters of the Islamic revolution that overthrew the shah, indicated the commission could use the Freedom of Information Act to get secret U.S. government documents.

According to Los Angeles attorney Leonard Weinglass, Bani-Sadr did not insist on the return of the shah to face trial and the return of his wealth that Iranian autorities insist he plundered illegally from this country.

American newspaper editorials vilified Ramsey Clark's unauthorized visit to Iran as "a disgusting propaganda display."

Oman pact

In related development, the U.S. and the Sultanate of Oman agreed Thursday to improve economic and military relations, including greater U.S. access to military facilities in the state, strategically located at the mouth of the Persian Gulf.

An exchange of diplomatic notes between the two countries marked the first successful conclusion to an intensive U.S. effort begun last year to obtain better support facilities for military operations on the Arabian Sea approaches to the Middle East oil-exporting area and close to Iran and Afghanistan.

The conclusion of a similar understanding with Kenya is expected soon.

S. Africans end boycott

Times News Services

CAPE TOWN — Colored (mixed race) student leaders today called off a seven-week school boycott in South Africa and told thousands of students to return to their classes on Monday.

But the decision still needed the agreement of other groups involved in the protest, which started among mixed race high school children in Cape Town and spread across South Africa.

The Committee of 81 ordered a return to classes last month, but called the students out again three days later.

A spokesman for the committee, which spearheaded the revolt against racial inequality in education, said the group decided that continuing the boycott would not achieve anything.

The root cause of student anger is the wide disparity between how much the state spends on educating each white child and the expenditure on pupils from other racial groups.

Plainclothes police mingling with demonstrators arrested scores of rock-throwing students in Cape Town Wednesday and some arrests were made. The rest of the country was reported calm by police.

Drapeau gets Olympic blast

By LEW DIGGS

MONTREAL (CP) — Justice Albert Malouf's inquiry into the Montreal Oympic cost spiral has issued a slew of recommendations to facilitate criminal prosecutions of corrupt municipal officials and to tighten public and government control over major construction projects.

An entire volume of the four-volume report is devoted to "conflicts of interest and other irregular practices," mainly involving links between officials of Mayor Jean Drapeau's city administration, Olympic contractors and the electoral funds of the Quebec Liberals and Drapeau's Civic Party.

Drapeau was heavily criticized for his key role in leading an orgy of spending on lavish sports facilities.

The report said Drapeau was "the real project manager" until late 1975, when the Quebec government stepped in because of chaotic conditions on the work-site.

"Not only was he entirely lacking in the aptitudes and knowledge required for this role, but also, as a politician and first magistrate of the city, he should have avoided placing himself in this position," said the report.

The sports facilities — including the main stadium built at a cost of more than $615 million — whose designs were chosen by Drapeau are described as "superfluous, unnecessarily luxurious and impressive."

The report said that given Drapeau's extraordinary power and personality, the mayor "must assume the greater part of the blame for the decisions made and initiatives undertaken with regard to the organization and construction of the Olympic installations."

The commission was immediately knocked by Premier Rene Levesque for supposedly being too soft on the former Liberal government of Robert Bourassa.

The report did say, however, that "close relations existed between the campaign funds of the party in power (the Liberals) and the awarding of government or Olympic contracts to certain professionals."

It also provided details of how special slush funds, one of which was apparently controlled by Bourassa himself, were set up by the governing Liberal party using contributions from Olympic contractors.

The report criticized Drapeau for his choice of Paris architect Roger Taillibert to design the facilities and for Drapeau's "sustained, unconditional support" of the French architect, who refused to allow the slightest cost-cutting changes.

The decision to hire an architect working in another country led to a situation which "created many serious problems of co-ordination and labor relations, which played a large part in the cost increases."

Drapeau was also slammed for alleged negligence in dealing with his right-hand man, Gerard Niding, who was chairman of the city's executive committee when lucrative Olympic contracts were being handed out without public tenders.

"The commission is of the opinion that Mr. Niding's manner of awarding the contracts mentioned in the evidence definitely placed him in a conflict of interest situation."

This conflict of interest included Niding's relations with an Olympic contractor, Regis Trudeau, who paid more than $160,000 for a luxury country house Niding had built in Bromont, Que.

Also mentioned are Niding's business dealings with several other Games contractors.

The report said Drapeau should have moved quickly to find out about Niding's involvement with these contractors. It said he had passed up several opportunities "to clear up the doubts expressed about his administration by getting to the bottom of things."

"It is evident that Mr. Drapeau had no desire to clear up the question. His testimony revealed a determination to ignore the problem."

It was the mayor's responsibility to conduct a thorough investigation of the situation concerning Niding's house in Bromont, the inquiry said. In not doing so, Drapeau "failed in his obligations as first magistrate of the City of Montreal and leader of the Civic Party."

Drapeau had his knuckles rapped by the inquiry for personally accepting five cheques from Trudeau for the Civic Party. The cheques, for $2,000 each, were given to Drapeau in his city hall office when the two men were alone.

This was described as "another example of a situation likely to affect the image of impartial man-

Williams blames city for homes hit by fire code

The city of Victoria has only itself to blame if it forces rest homes to close down because they can't afford to meet the fire safety regulations of the National Building Code.

Attorney-General Allan Williams said Wednesday the city had the option of adopting much less stringent fire safety guidelines, drawn up in 1978 and used voluntarily in most areas of the province.

Instead, Fire Chief Eric Simmons is enforcing a city bylaw which requires that tough code standards be met.

The Victoria city council fire safety committee has recommended that a letter be sent to the attorney-general, pointing out that enforcing these standards may force rest home operators to close down because they cannot afford to pay for the necessary upgrading.

But Williams said the problem and the remedy are in the city's own hands.

"If Chief Simmons were satisfied to accept the guidelines which have been found to be acceptable to the Vancouver fire department, then I'm sure many of these rest home facilities could meet those guidelines on a voluntary basis," he said.

"Chief Simmons has chosen, for his own reasons, to enforce the city of Victoria bylaw rather than these guidelines. Therein rests the problem."

One of the requirements of the code would be to change the battery-operated smoke detectors distributed by the provincial government for commercial-type detectors with large alarm bells.

However, Williams said the provincial fire commissioner feels the battery-operated units may be more effective and less troublesome.

Caring in the community

It takes all levels of society to care for our elderly — and Victoria will soon boast a shining, new example. Page 27.

Ferry walkouts fought

The B.C. Ferry Corp. has asked the Labor Relations Board for a cease-and-desist order to avert disruptions of ferry service by employees participating in pension protests. Page 36.

Pan-Pacific withdrawing

By NORMAN GIDNEY

The controversial Pan-Pacific Society said today it is withdrawing from further involvement in planning the waterfront convention centre in Victoria.

In a letter to Mayor Bill Tindall and Finance Minister Hugh Curtis, the eight downtown businessmen who formed the society last year said they would also not press for Pan-Pacific to become the managers of the convention centre.

They stressed it was not a resignation and said the society will remain intact and place all its research material at the disposal of whatever group is formerd to pick up where Pan-Pacific left off.

In their swan song, they did not refer directly to the conflict of interest controversy that blew up last week around Pan-Pacific president Dr. Arne Lane.

"There has been, of late, some concern expressed in some quarters as to the proposals made by the society for the future management of the centre," the letter said.

Pan-Pacific's proposal for a nine-member board on which the society would have a majority of directors was put forward only because it is convinced that there must be management of the centre which is independent of municipal or provincial governments.

The province, through the Provincial Capital Commission, is providing the land and most of the financing for the $8 million centre. The city is paying for a $1.7 million-parkade and both governments are committed to sharing the projected deficit in the first years of operation.

"We would urge yourselves and the capital commission to seek a management formula which will take full advantage of the tremendous reservoir of skills available through our fellow citizens," Pan-Pacific said.

"We would caution in the strongest possible terms that all of our research and all the advice received throughout North America advises against direct or indirect government control of the management board.

"Our own recommendations which involve the utilization of a number of community groups, have been designed with these latter points in mind."

Besides Dr. Lane, Pan-Pacific includes hotelmen Ken King and Ted Balderson, radio station oficials John Ansell and Mel Cooper, realtor Phillip Holmes, Rodger Lutz of Westcoast Savings and Robert Mussett of Labatts Breweries.

This $200 fine Canadian only

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bill Whitnack won't forget the day he was stopped on suspicion of being a Canadian — by the RCMP, in Canada.

The Surrey businessman was driving a car belonging to a visiting American friend when he became a victim of a little-known Revenue Canada regulation which cost him $200.

The edict prohibits Canadian residents from driving foreign-purchased vehicles on which applicable Canadian taxes and duty have not been paid.

Whitnack's friends from Abilene, Texas, were holidaying in B.C. and wanted to spend a day sightseeing on Vancouver Island.

"There were six of them and a child. My car is bigger, so I let them use mine and I used theirs to get to the office and the bank," Whitnack said in an interview.

On his way home, he was stopped by two Surrey RCMP.

"When I asked why, the constable said I was suspected of being Canadian."

A check was run on Whitnack's B.C. driver's licence and the Texas plates on the car. The vehicle was then impounded and Whitnack was told it would cost him $200 to get it back.

Once a foreign-owned vehicle is used by a Canadian resident — not necessarily a citizen — it is immediately subject to all duties and excise taxes applicable had it been purchased by a Canadian resident, said S.Sgt. Daryl Beere of the Vancouver RCMP excise division.

It wouldn't have mattered if Whitnack's friends had also been in the car. A Canadian resident cannot operate a foreign-owned vehicle or vessel without paying customs' toll.

"It's not that common," Beere said. "We get maybe one or two a month."

But to his knowledge, he added, the ones they get aren't told to take it home and park it. They pay up to $400, depending how many times they're caught.

The regulation is to discourage Americans buying and registering vehicles or vessels in the U.S., driving them here and turning them over to a Canadian.

Ferry director admits appointment patronage

Former B.C. Ferry Corp. director Graeme Roberts of Nanaimo today told the legislature's committee on crown corporations his appointment was pure political patronage.

"Certainly it was a political patronage appointment," Roberts said.

"I ran as a candidate for Social Credit. Without a doubt, I would not have been appointed if I hadn't been the premier's friend."

NDP MLA Stuart Leggatt (Coquitlam-Moody) congratulated Roberts on his straightforward statement. "It shows that patronage doesn't have to be a dirty word."

Roberts and Shirley Mathieson, president of the Ferry Workers' Union, testified in the committee's continuing probe into operations of the ferry corporation.

Both spoke of their frustrations — Roberts with the board's lack of direction and purpose and Mathieson with management's attitude to labor relations.

Both agreed it is not desirable to have a cabinet minister as chairman of the ferry corporation board. Transportation Minister Alex Fraser is the present chairman.

Roberts said one of the frustrations of the board and of management is having to sit around for hours — sometimes for a whole afternoon — waiting for a chairman who is held up in another meeting.

Mathieson said ferry management generally overreacts to labor disputes and this tends to lead to escalation.

She blamed a good deal of the labor-management friction on Norm Thornber, a former union business agent who is now labor relations manager for the corporation.

The workers think of Thornber as a turncoat, she said.

Down a trifle

OTTAWA (CP) — The Bank of Canada rate was down a negligible amount today at 11.81 per cent, virtually unchanged from its 11.83 per cent level of the previous two weeks.

Record 263 enter Times tennis event

It's a record again.

Play in the seventh annual Victoria Times Public Parks Tennis tournament gets under way this weekend with a total of 263 entrants starting out in the summer-long tourney's five events.

That's eight more than the previous record of 255 and the huge field of 131 players in the men's singles is three more than the mark of 128 set two years ago.

Plane flies on solar power alone

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The scientist who made possible man-powered flight, including the epic pedal flight across the English Channel last year, Thursday unveiled the first solar powered airplane.

The plane already has flown more than 50 times, piloted by his 13-year-old son, designer Paul MacCready, said.

MacCready admitted, however, there was no practical future in solar-powered aviation, pointing out that when the clouds come out, "You have a glider."

MacCready is building an advanced version of his plane for a 100-pound woman test pilot which he hopes will fly from London to Paris. Photovoltaic cells, which convert sunlight directly to electricity, power the plane's electric motors.

MacCready displayed the frail, 62-pound Gossamer Penguin at a news conference today and said it would make its "official" flight debut in a few weeks. Technical observers will be invited to witness a two mile flight, piloted by Janice Brown, a first grade teacher from Bakersfield, Calif.

He said it has already made more than 50 test flights with his son, Marshall, at the controls.

"He's 13, and he weighs about 80 pounds."

Weight is a critical factor for MacCready's "Gossamer" planes, made largely of plastic foam and Mylar, a very light but strong plastic film.

His Gossamer Condor won the $100,000 prize for the first achievement of human-powered flight in August 1977. Last June the Gossamer Albatross collected the $213,000 prize for the first human-powered flight across the English Channel.

Both planes were kept aloft by a pilot pedalling furiously on a bicycle-type crank to spin the propeller.

The Penguin has not yet taken off on solar power, though it has when powered by a battery.

But after being launched, kite-like, by his sons pulling ropes, it has sustained flight for up to 100 yards on power from the photovoltaic cells, reaching about 15 mph and an altitude of 12 feet, MacCready said.

Under construction is the Solar Challenger, which MacCready said will fly 100 miles between Los Angeles and San Diego before the end of the summer and then make an international flight.

"I enjoy this as a challenge," MacCready said. "It's a real fun thing to do. But this just isn't a practical way to move an airplane. A little gasoline engine would do all this far more efficiently."

Ranger Oil Canada rose 1¼ to $33½, Coseka Resources 1 to $22 and North Canadian Oils ¾ to $19½. Canadian Natural Resources slipped ⅛ to $18⅞ and National Petroleum 15 cents to $3.60.

Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prices were up in heavy trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

In the industrials, B.C. Resources Investment Corp. was unchanged at $6.15 on 39,985 shares and Canadian Javelin Ltd. was steady at $1.25 on 4,000. Daon Development gained ⅜ to $7½ on 1,200 and Hal Roach Studios was unchanged at $2.50 on 800. Balco Industries was steady at $7 and Keg Restaurants dropped .05 to $2.80.

On the resource and development board, Zone Petroleum was up .25 to $3.15 on 84,700 shares and Amflo Corp. Warrants was unchanged at .59 on 83,600. Anglo-Bomarc Mines advanced .45 to $4.15 on 80,500 and International Brenmac Development was down .10 to $1.60 on 80,260. International Brenmac Warrants was steady at .40 and Rhodes Resources declined .21 to $2.39.

Tandem Resources gained .06 to .80 on 102,500 and River Mountain Resources was up .07 to .73 on 54,000. Double Eagle Resources gained .30 to $4.15 and Poseidon Explorations declined .07 to $1.66.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market chalked up a broad gain, following through on Wednesday's rally.

Analysts said the market continued to benefit from declining interest rates.

A few large U.S. banks cut their prime lending rates to 13 from 14 per cent. And the First National Bank of Greater Miami lowered its basic charge on blue-chip loans to 12½ per cent.

Falling interest rates have received much of the credit for the market's spring rally, because they have eased fears of a money crunch and reduced the relative appeal of interest-bearing investments that compete with stocks for investors' funds.

Gulf United led the active list, up 1⅜ to $21¼ in trading marked by numerous large blocks. The company said the activity might stem from purchases by American Financial Corp., which has agreed to acquire up to 20 per cent of Gulf United.

The NYSE's composite index rose 0.62 to 64.86.

Volume totalled 35.12 million shares with two hours to go.

London

LONDON (Reuter) — The London stock market was mixed near the close of moderate trading.

The Financial Times Index of 30 industrials closed at 423.4, up 0.4

Banks and golds were higher but equities were mixed.

Canadian issues were also mixed.

b.c. briefs

Surprise ending by Crown

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Crown has abruptly concluded its B.C. Supreme Court case against 10 radio and television stations charged with violating the Combines Investigation Act.

The move Wednesday appeared to surprise defence lawyers, who were expected to argue the Crown has failed to prove its case and that the charges should be dismissed.

The stations and six individuals are charged with conspiring to unduly lessen competition in the sale or supply of broadcast advertising time in B.C. between June 30, 1976 and Dec. 1, 1977.

Guild may appeal

VANCOUVER (CP) — An appeal is being considered against an arbitration decision that rejects a claim of higher pay for editorial staff of Vancouver Sun and Province.

The Vancouver-New Westminister Newspaper Guild, which had sought pay raises for about 225 employees on the two daily newspapers because of changes arising from introduction of a computer system, said in a statement Wednesday it is unhappy with the decision reached by San Francisco lawyer John Kagel.

The 46-page decision released Tuesday said the computer system substantially changed the function of only four job classifications. Union leaders estimate only 40 to 50 employees will be eligible for compensation under Kagel's award.

Training urged

KELOWNA (CP) — A coroner's jury inquiring into the death of a 15-year-old youth from nearby Westbank has recommended all B.C. high schools offer mandatory driver training programs.

James Wilson suffered severe head injuries April 26 when he was tossed off the hood of a car when the vehicle stopped. The youth, who had been riding on the hood, died three days later in hospital.

Confidence vital

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — The federal government has to revive consumer confidence in the economy before the housing industry can get back on its feet, the president of a national construction industry organization said Wednesday.

And that confidence will continue to evaporate until escalating mortgage and other interest rates are curtailed by government legislation, said George Frieser, of Edmonton, president of the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada.

Protest planned

KELOWNA (CP) — The Kettle Valley Railway Heritage Society says it will hold a mass protest rally Saturday, set up picket lines outside Premier Bill Bennett's constituency office here and block work crews who try to demolish the small Okanagan rail line.

The announcement follows the provincial government's refusal Tuesday to provide between $25 million and $30 million from the Heritage Trust to save the CP Rail track for use as a tourist line.
